THE COUNTY CONVENTION.

Enthusiastic Gathering of Centre County Republicans.

JNO. G. LOVE FOR JUDGE

Womelsdorf and Knisely for Assembly--Geo. E. Lamb for Prothonotary--H. H. Harshberger for District Attorney and D. W. Pletcher Surveyor.

REEDER FOR COUNTY CHAIRMAN

Never was the Republican party in as good condition as it is at present. This was manifest at the enthusiastic county convention held in the Court House Tuesday. It sounded the death-knell to factional fighting and placed the party on the sure road to success next November.

It was 11 o'clock when County Chairman Wilbur F. Reeder called the convention to order and the Court House was crowded with delegates and interested spectators. The call for the county convention was read by G. W. Rees, of Bellefonte, after which Titus M. Gramley, of Spring Mills, was selected as Permanent Chairman and he made an excellent presiding officer.

J. Frank McCoy, of Potters Mills, and J. Thomas Mitchell of Bellefonte, were made secretaries, and G. W. Rees, reading clerk. The roll call showed a full attendance of delegates.

The chair then appointed the following committee of resolutions:

S. H. Bennison, of Marion;
J. Harris Hoy, of Benner;
Dr. J. W. Kurtz, of Howard;
G. G. Fink, of Huston;
T. B. Motz, of Penn.

The committee retired to prepare the resolutions.

The order of business was then adopted and the first thing on the program was the nomination for President Judge. Only one name was considered that of Hon. John G. Love, of Bellefonte, was placed in nomination in an able speech by Clement Dale, Esq., of Bellefonte. The nomination was seconded by John Gowland, of Philipsburg. There being no other candidate, Judge Love was re-nominated by acclamation amid much enthusiasm.

The next office to be filled was that of Prothonotary. George E. Lamb, of Philipsburg; and Jacob R. Bible, of Potters Mills, were placed in nomination. Lamb received the nomination on the first ballot the vote being Lamb 89, Bible 32.

The greatest contest was for assembly and four candidates were placed in nomination. They were Philip E. Womelsdorf, of Philipsburg; John L. Knisely, of Bellefonte; John A. Daley, of Romola; A. A. Dale, of Bellefonte.

Mr. Dale in a neat speech withdrew his name as a candidate before the balloting began. Womelsdorf was named on the first ballot and Knisely on the second.

The vote was as follows:

	1st	2nd
Womelsdorf	107
Knisely	71	66
Daley	62	58

The nominations of Womelsdorf and Knisely were made unanimous.

H. H. Harshberger of Bellefonte, was nominated for District Attorney, and D. W. Pletcher, of Howard, for County Surveyor, both nominations being by acclamation.

J. S. McCarger, of Bellefonte, placed in nomination for County Chairman for 1905 the name of Wilbur F. Reeder, of Bellefonte, and he was elected without opposition.

The committee on resolutions then made the following report.

The Republicans of Centre county, by their representatives in convention assembled, do hereby reaffirm their devotion to the principles and traditions of the Republican party.

We endorse and applaud the administration of President Roosevelt and the wise and patriotic domestic and foreign policies which he has pursued and under which our people, at home as well as abroad, are honored, protected and defended; and believing as we do, that his policy has for its aims the best and highest welfare of American labor and American interests, we pledge to him a united support at the polls in November next.

We commend and give our unqualified indorsement to the careful and vigilant course of our Senators and Representatives in Congress. They have not only discharged their respective duties toward the Nation and State with distinguished and marked ability, but they have conscientiously cared for the interests of all individuals entrusted to them. At their hands all receive the same courteous consideration, as many widows of patriots, deserving veterans and others in private life can attest.

The patriotic, careful and economical administration of Samuel W. Pennypacker, Governor of this great Commonwealth, commends itself to the people of the State, and demonstrates that as Chief Executive, he always keeps in view the best interests of the tax payers and at the same time maintains the dignity and credit of the Commonwealth.

In the death of Hon. M. S. Quay; the Republican party of this State, as well as of the nation, has lost a fearless and conscientious leader, a champion of the people's cause and a devoted adherent to the great principles of protection to American industry and American institutions.

That in Hon. Boise Penrose, the Republican party recognizes a leader upon whom the people of this state can safely rely to protect and promote their every interest.

That we earnestly pledge our united and individual support to the Republican state ticket, as well as to our County ticket this day named and we promise our utmost effort to secure the election of every candidate on the ticket.

In Hon. John G. Love, we have a candidate for the high office of President Judge of our Courts, who, for the ten years past, has discharged the duties thereof with fairness, impartiality and distinguished ability. We point to his record which shows that out of fifty-five of his decisions reviewed by the Appellate Courts, there have been only five reversals. He has so conducted the public business that suiters are no longer required to wait two years or more to have their causes disposed of. By his careful and economical administration of the office, great saving has resulted to the tax payers of the county. This unimpeachable record of Judge Love, his reknowledged legal ability and integrity of character are a guarantee to the people of the county, to litigants and to tax payers that their rights are sacred and secure under his administration. They not only commend him for re election but are unanswerable arguments for retaining in office one so eminently qualified, and they refute the idea that no jurist ought to succeed himself on the bench. The best interests of the people are preserved by retaining the official who has served them faithfully and who is capable, rather than by experimenting with one untried and inexperienced. Such a policy is recognized in our neighboring Twenty-fifth Judicial District, composed of the counties of Clinton, Cameron and Elk, where the present incumbent is serving his fourth successive term, as well as in many other districts throughout the Commonwealth.

This ended the business of the convention and speeches being called for addresses were made by Hon. John G. Love, Col. Wilbur F. Reeder, Hon. Philip E. Womeldorf, John Knisely, George E. Lamb John A. Daley and others.

Can't Favor Postmasters.

A ruling in the postoffice department forbids postmasters crediting to themselves cancellations of stamps received from a patron of another office. It was customary in times past, for politicians to favor postmasters by sending them large quantities of mail matter, the cancelling of which added to the receipts of the office. Under the new regulation postmasters must report all mail matter received outside their jurisdiction to the department, giving the name of the person or persons who mail the matter, and in no case is the postmaster allowed anything for the cancellations thus made.

A Rooster's Advice.

A duck which had laid several dozen eggs during the season, complained that while her working record was better than the hen's the latter had books and poems written in her honor, while no one had a word of praise for the duck. A wise old rooster standing by said: "You lay an egg and then waddle off without saying a word, while that sister of mine never lays one without letting everyone in the neighborhood know about it. If you want to cut any ice around here you must advertise."

MARY E. PENNEY A WINNER!

Popular Snow Shoe Teacher Takes World's Fair Trip.

HER VOTE WAS 22855

Miss Ella Levy was Second With 15962 and Miss Craighead Third With 5088—W. Harrison Walker, John S. Walker and H. W. Faus the Final Judges.

ALL OVER NOW BUT THE SHOUTING.

The great World's Fair contest for the most popular teacher in Centre county inaugurated by the Bellefonte Republican and Daily News closed Tuesday evening at 7 o'clock and Miss Mary E. Penney, Snow Shoe's popular young school teacher, proved the winner by a large majority. The final vote was counted in the law office of Fortney & Walker Tuesday evening, the judges being W. Harrison Walker, Mayor of Bellefonte, John S. Walker, manager of McCalmont & Company's business at this place, and Herbert W. Faus, of Snow Shoe. Burgess Walker represented the Republican, John S. Walker acted for Miss Levy and Herbert W. Faus for Miss Penney. It took an hour and a half to count and adjust the votes. Many votes were to old to be counted and had to be thrown out. The last count previous to the final vote was held last Thursday and since then the following number of votes were cast: Miss Penney 6107, Miss Levy 1575, Miss Craighead 9, Miss Heckman 1, Miss Alice K. Dorworth 58, Miss Longacre 100, John F. Garthoff 24.

This added to the previous vote made the total vote as follows:

Miss Mary E. Penney, Snow Shoe	22855
Miss Ella Levy, Milesburg	15962
Miss Bessie Craighead, Bellefonte	5088
Miss Rebecca Heckman, Bellefonte	2286
" Jennie Longacre, Bellefonte	1577
" Alice K. Dorsworth, Bellefonte	867
Mr. John F. Garthoff Bellefonte	492

Everything was decided satisfactory to all the judges and they unanimously declared Miss Mary E. Penney, the fortunate one to take the trip to the great Louisiana Purchase Exposition at St. Louis.

The news of Miss Penney's victory soon spread over Bellefonte and was promptly telephoned to Snow Shoe. Eager friends had gathered at W. A. Sickle's drug store, the Mountain House and Uzzles Hotel at Snow Shoe and when the news reached there that Miss Penney was the winner there was great enthusiasm. Miss Penny, herself, was at the residence of Rev. H. J. Schuchart, the Methodist pastor at Snow Shoe, and there received the news of the result. She was kept busy for some time answering congratulatory messages over the telephone and many called on her personally to tender their congratulations.

Bellefonte people were not long in hearing the news and while they regretted that a home teacher could not carry off the prize yet all seemed glad that such a worthy young lady as Miss Penney should take the trip.

The friends of Miss Ella Levy made a noble fight in her behalf and kept the leaders guessing until the last count of votes. The only regret of the Republican is that we can't sent both teachers to St. Louis.

To Miss Penney's friends at Snow Shoe is due the credit for her great success. They organized a systematic campaign under the leadership of H. W. Faus, W. A. Sickel, J. Blair Yarnell, Ray Gilliland, R. E. Kech, Sam Buddinger, E. A. Humpton, David Stewart and others and the way they gathered in the votes was a caution. They worked hard and deserve all the success they attained and we congratulate Miss Penney not only on winning this trip to the World's Fair but on having so many warm friends which is a sure indication of her popularity and of the esteem in which she held by all who know her.

ACADEMY WINS.

Defeated Strong Snow Shoe Team By the Score of 14 to 4.

Five hundred people witnessed an interesting game of base ball at Meadowbrooke Park on Wednesday afternoon between the strong Snow Shoe team and the Bellefonte Academy. The mountaineers have been defeating everything in their neck of woods but the "boys on the hill" proved to strong a proposition for them and they went down to defeat by the score of 14 to 4. Burns pitched a strong game for the Academy and was well supported. There was some kicking on the decisions of the umpire, otherwise the game passed very quietly.

A Sad Accident.

Very sad indeed was the death of little Louise Toner, the four year old daughter of Liveryman James Toner, of South Water street. The little girl's mother was sick in bed and two other children were down with illness when on Friday afternoon about 2 o'clock little Louise wandered out by herself to play. While playing near the Pennsylvania Match factory she accidentally fell into the water which flows very swiftly at this point. No one saw her fall in except a little son of George Weights who ran to give the alarm. When assistance reached the scene, the body had floated out-of-sight. When the body reached the head of the dam opposite the rear end of the Shirt factory it was seen by Ed. Gehret who jumped into the water up to his waist and brought the child to shore. It had been in the water about twenty minutes and was still living when brought to shore. Doctors Kirk, Sebring and Dobbins were sent for and they worked for two hours trying to resuscitate the child but without avail as it was beyond all human aid. The body was taken to the home of the parents on South Water street. She is survived by her parents, two brothers and two sisters.

The funeral took place Sunday afternoon from St. John's Catholic church. Interment in the Catholic cemetery.

A DOUBLE WEDDING

Brilliant Matrimonial Event at John A. Daley's

HOME AT ROMOLA

Frank E. Daley Weds Miss Florence B. Oyler and Harry J. Yearick Takes For His Bride Miss Annie L. Daley.

MANY GUESTS WERE IN ATTENDANCE.

A pretty double marriage was solemnized Wednesday June 8 at high noon at the residence of Mr. and Mrs. John A. Daley at Romola, a few miles from Howard, where their daughter Miss Annie L. Daley, and Harry I. Yearick, the latter of Nittany valley, and Miss Blanche F. Oyler of Romola and their son Frank A. Daley were united in the bonds of holy matrimony.

Rev. Avery Long of Salona was the officiating clergyman and performed the ceremony for both couples. The wedding took place on the spacious porch of the farm house of Mr. and Mrs. Daley, which had been beautifully decorated with evergreens. Miss Maud Daley, sister of the bride, was bridesmaid and Toner Robb of Romola groomsman for Mr. Yearick and Miss Daley. Miss Laura Oyler, sister of the bride, and Fred Harter of Johnsonburg were bridesmaid and groomsman for Mr. Daley and Miss Oyler. Miss Velma Tobias of Mackeyville presided at the piano and played the wedding march from Lohengrin.

The brides and bridesmaids wore beautiful costumes of white, the brides carrying boquets of white carnations, while the bridesmaids' boquets were pink carnations.

There were 130 invited guests present to witness the ceremony, and the wedding repast was served under tents on the lawn.

The young folks are all popular in the localities in which they reside, and many beautiful gifts were received by the brides.

Mr. Yearick and his bride were both successfull school teachers. The double wedding was the most brilliant and important social event that has occured in that section for some time. Messrs. Yearick and Daley and their brides left for a wedding trip that will include visits to Philadelphia, Atlantic City and Washington.

Beautiful Childrens Day Services at the United Brethren Church.

On Sunday evening the Sunday School of the United Brethren church held their Childrens Day Services. The House of God which was crowded with people was beautifully decorated with long ropes of spruce, the altar was literally covered with ferns, palms and other flowers which presented a grand appearance.

The little children in their recitations and singing were very good, and acquitted themselves as well as any of their size. The older scholars of the school performed their parts in an admirable manner and won the praise of the entire audience.

William Shope, a son of Mr. and Mrs. Reynolds Shope delivered a speech entitled "My Song shall be of Bethlehem." The young man has a clear, distinct voice and the way he recited is certainly praiseworthy.

"The little White Lambs" was a pretty part on the programme, the principals in this were Miss Margaret Davidson, Loretta and William Shope.

A beautiful tableau entitled "The Good Shepherd was carried out with good effect.

The singing by the choir was of high class and showed the work of much training. They were ably assisted by Mr. C. C. Shuey. Miss Mary Davidson, the organist deserves much credit for this excellent music.

The entire service from beginning to end was well carried out and was pretty and entertaining. It showed that a great deal of hard work must have been done the past few weeks to have these children trained in the manner they were, and those who had them in charge deserve great credit.

STRICKEN WITH APOPLEXY.

Squire Reifsnyder of Millheim, in a Serious Condition.

J. H. Reifsnyder, a well known justice of the peace and business man of Millheim, came in from Bellefonte last night and took rooms at the new Columbus hotel. Before retiring he complained of feeling ill but did not think it serious enough to summon a phyician. This morning he was unable to leave his room and Dr. R. Armstrong was called who found the man on the verge of apoplexy and he directed that he be sent to the hospital, which was done. 'Squire Reifsnyder came here to transact some legal business for Miss Emma Bair, of Rebersburg, who accompanied him here and took a room at the same hotel, but who did not learn of his illness until the doctor had directed that he be sent to the hospital.

Word from the hospital this afternoon is to the effect that Mr. Reifsnyder still remains unconscious.—Tuesday's Lock Haven Democrat.

The Republican joins with their many friends to wish them unbounded happiness and joy through life.

James Gardner Killed In Johnsonburg Mill.

A Johnsonburg dispatch says that James Gardner, 45 years old, was the victim Monday of a shocking accident, resulting in his death. He was employed as a helper at the Clarion paper mill and at 11.30 a. m. went to the basement to oil the shafting. While he was so engaged, Gardner's clothing was caught by a set screw of the shafting and he was whirred around it and hurled with great force to the floor, 10 feet below. Almost every bone in his body was broken and there was life in him only for a few minutes after the accident occurred. The shaft was turning at the rate of 1000 revolutions per minute when the unfortunate man was caught by it. The clothing was stripped from his body and nothing remained on him but one shoe. A wife and four children are left to mourn his death. The remains were taken to Blanchard Wednesday and interment was made in the Baptist cemetery there. Rev. G. Stanley West officiated.

Children's Day at the Lutheran Church.

Children's day in the Lutheran church Sunday was one of unprecedented success. The pastor preached an appropriate sermon in the morning. In the evening both the audience room and Sunday school rooms were densely crowded by deeply interested audience who were delighted with the beautiful program rendered by the Sunday school. The children under the training of Mrs. H. C. Holloway, did remarkably well, and deserve special notice. The singing by the choir was fine. The church was handsomely decorated. Short addresses were made by the pastor and W. P. Kuhn the superintendent. A liberal offering was made for the benefit of the Orphan's home at Loysville, Pa.

To Kill the Rats.

Here's a farmer's receipt for ridding his premises of rats and mice: If you will sprinkle sulphur on your barn floor and through your corn as you gather, there will not be a rat or mouse bother. I have done this several years and have never been bothered by rats or mice. I have some old corn in the crib at present and not a rat or a mouse is to be found. In stacking hay or oats sprinkle sulphur on the ground and a little through each load, and, my word for it, rats or mice can't stay there. A pound of sulphur will be sufficient to preserve a large barn of corn, it is good for the stock and it will not hurt the corn for bread.

Moran of the Lady Letty

CONTINUED.

Wilbur started as though struck, and took himself hurriedly away, but the man's words had touched off in his brain a veritable mine of conjecture. Moran in Magdalena bay was consistent, congruous and fitted into her environment. But how—how was Wilbur to explain her to San Francisco, and how could his behavior seem else than ridiculous to the men of his club and to the women whose dinner invitations he was wont to receive? They could not understand the change that had been wrought in him. They did not knew Moran, the savage, half tamed Valkyrie so suddenly become a woman. Hurry as he would, the schooner could not be put to sea again within a fortnight. Even though he elected to live aboard in the meanwhile, the very business of her preparation would call him to the city again and again. Moran could not be kept a secret. As it was, all the world knew of her by now. On the other hand, he could easily understand her position. To her it seemed simplicity itself that they two who loved each other should sail away and pass their lives together upon the sea, as she and her father had done before.

Like most men, Wilbur had to walk when he was thinking hard. He sent the dory back to the schooner with word to Moran that he would take a walk around the beach and return in an hour or two. He set off along the shore in the direction of Fort Mason, the old red brick fort at the entrance to the Golden Gate. At this point in the Presidio government reservation the land is solitary. Wilbur followed the line of the beach to the old fort, and there on the very threshold of the western world, at the very outpost of civilization, sat down in the lee of the crumbling fortification and scene by scene reviewed the extraordinary events of the past six months.

In front of him ran the narrow channel of the Golden Gate; to his right was the bay and the city; at his left the open Pacific.

He saw himself the day of his advent aboard the Bertha in his top hat and frock coat; saw himself later "braking down" at the windlass, the Petrel within hailing distance.

Then the pictures began to thicken fast: The derelict bark Lady Letty rolling to her scuppers, abandoned and lonely; the "boy" in the wheel box, Kitchell wrenching open the desk in the captain's stateroom, Captain Sternersen buried at sea, his false teeth upside down; the black fury of the squall, and Moran at the wheel; Moran, lying at full length on the deck, getting the altitude of a star; Magdalena bay, the shark fishing, the mysterious lifting and shuddering of the schooner, the beachcombers' junk, with its staring red eyes; Hoang, naked to the waist, gleaming with sweat and whale oil; the ambergris, the race to beach the sinking schooner, the never to be forgotten night when he and Moran had camped together on the beach; Hoang taken prisoner and the hideous filing of his teeth; the beachcombers, silent and watchful behind their sand breastworks; the Chinaman he had killed twitching and hiccoughing at his feet; Moran turned berserker, bursting down upon him through a haze of smoke; Charlie, dying in the hammock aboard the schooner, ordering his funeral with its "four piecee horse;" Coronado, the incongruous scene in the ballroom, and, last of all, Josie Herrick, in white duck and kid shoes, giving her hand to Moran, in her boots and belt, hatless as ever, her sleeves rolled up to above her elbows, her white, strong arm extended, her ruddy face and pale, milk blue eyes gravely observant, her heavy braids, yellow as ripening rye, hanging over shoulder and breast.

A sudden explosion of cold wind, striking down blanketwise and bewildering from out the west, made Wilbur look up quickly. The gray sky seemed scudding along close overhead. The bay, the narrow channel of the Golden Gate, the outside ocean, were all whitening with crests of waves. At his feet the huge green ground swells thundered to the attack of the fort's granite foundations. Through the Gate the bay seemed rushing out to the Pacific. A bewildered gull shot by, tacking and slanting against the gusts that would drive it out to sea. Evidently the storm was not far off. Wilbur rose to his feet and saw the Bertha Millner, close in, unbridled and free as a runaway horse, headed directly for the open sea and rushing on with all the impetus of wind and tide.

CHAPTER XIV.

A LITTLE while after Wilbur had set off from the station, while Moran was making the last entries in the logbook, seated at the table in the cabin, Jim appeared at the door.

"Well?" she said, looking up.

"China boy him want go asho' plenty big, see um flen up Chinatown in um city."

"Shore leave, is it?" said Moran. "You deserted once before without even saying goodby, and my hand in the fire, you'll come back this time dotty with opium. Get away with you! We'll have men aboard here in a few days."

"Can go?" inquired Jim suavely.

"I said so. Report our arrival to your ship company."

Hoang rowed Jim and the coolies ashore and then returned to the schooner with the dory and streamed her astern. As he passed the cabin door on his way forward Moran hailed him.

"I thought you went ashore?" she cried.

"Heap flaid," he answered. "Him other boy go up Chinatown; him tell Sam Yup. I tink Sam Yup alla same killee me. I no leave um ship two, thlee day. Bimeby I go Olegon. I stay topside ship. You want um cook. I cook plenty fine; stand up watch for you."

Indeed, ever since leaving Coronado the ex-beachcomber had made himself very useful about the schooner—had been, in fact, obsequiousness itself and seemed to be particularly desirous of gaining the good will of the Bertha's officers. He understood pigeon English better than Jim and spoke it even better than Charlie had done. He acted the part of interpreter between Wilbur and the hands, even turned to in the galley upon occasion and of his own accord offered to give the vessel a coat of paint above the water line. Moran turned back to her log, and Hoang went forward. Standing on the forward deck, he looked after the Bertha's coolies until they disappeared behind a row of pine trees on the Presidio reservation, going cityward. Wilbur was nowhere in sight. For a long time Hoang studied the lifeboat station narrowly while he made a great show of coiling a length of rope. The station was just out of hailing distance. Nobody seemed stirring. The whole shore and back land thereabout was deserted; the edge of the city was four miles distant. Hoang returned to the forecastle hatch and went below, groping under his bunk in his ditty box.

"Well, what is it?" exclaimed Moran a moment later as the beachcomber entered the cabin and shut the door behind him.

Hoang did not answer, but she did not need to repeat the question. In an instant Moran knew very well what he had come for.

"Heavens!" she exclaimed under her breath, springing to her feet. "Why didn't we think of this?"

Hoang slipped his knife from the sleeve of his blouse. For an instant the old imperiousness, the old savage pride and anger, leaped again in Moran's breast, then died away forever. She was no longer the same Moran of that first fight on board the schooner, when the beachcombers had plundered her of her "loot." Only a few weeks ago and she would have fought with Hoang without hesitation and without mercy; would have wrenched a leg from the table and brained him where he stood. But she had learned since to know what it meant to be dependent, to rely for protection upon some one who was stronger than she, to know her weakness, to know that she was at last a woman and to be proud of it.

She did not fight; she had no thought of fighting. Instinctively she cried aloud: "Mate, mate! Oh, mate, where are you? Help me!" And Hoang's knife nailed the words within her throat.

The "loot" was in a brass bound chest under one of the cabin's bunks stowed in two gunny bags. Hoang drew them out, knotted the two together and, slinging them over his shoulder, regained the deck.

He looked carefully at the angry sky and swelling seas, noting the direction of the wind and set of the tide, then went forward and cast the anchor chains from the windlass in such a manner that the schooner must inevitably wrench free with the first heavy strain. The dory was still tugging at the line astern. Hoang dropped the sacks in the boat, swung himself over the side and rowed calmly toward the station's wharf. If any notion of putting to sea with the schooner had entered the obscure, perverted cunning of his mind, he had almost instantly rejected it. Chinatown was his aim. Once there and under the protection of his tong, Hoang knew that he was safe. He knew the hiding places that the See Yup association provided for its members, hiding places whose very existence was unknown to the police of the white devil.

No one interrupted—no one even noticed—his passage to the station. At best it was nothing more than a coolie carrying a couple of gunny sacks across his shoulder. Two hours later Hoang was lost in San Francisco's Chinatown.

* * * * * * *

At the sight of the schooner sweeping out to sea Wilbur was for an instant smitten rigid. What had happened? Where was Moran? Why was there nobody on board? A swift, sharp sense of some unnamed calamity leaped suddenly at his throat. Then he was aware of a clattering of hoofs along the road that led to the fort. Hodgson threw himself from one of the horses that were used in handling the surf boat and ran to him, hatless and panting.

"Look!" he shouted. "Look! Your schooner! Do you see her? She broke away after I'd started to tell you—to tell you—to tell you—your girl there on board— It was horrible!"

"Is she all right?" cried Wilbur at top voice, for the clamor of the gale was increasing every second.

"All right! No; they've killed her—somebody—the coolies, I think—knifed her! I went out to ask you people to come into the station to have supper with me"—

"Killed her! Killed her! Who? I don't believe you"—

"Wait—to have supper with me, and I found her there on the cabin floor. She was still breathing. I carried her up on deck. There was nobody else aboard. I carried her up and laid her on the deck, and she died there. Just now I came after you to tell you, and"—

"But—great heavens, man! Who killed her? Where is she? Oh! But of course it isn't true! How did you know? Moran killed! Moran killed!"

"And the schooner broke away after I started!"

"Moran killed! But—but—she's not dead yet! We'll have to see"—

"She died on the deck. I brought her up and laid her on"—

"How do you know she's dead? Where is she? Come on; we'll go right back to her—to the station!"

"She's on board—out there!"

"Where—where is she? Man, tell me where she is!"

"Out there aboard the schooner. I brought her up on deck—left her on the schooner—on the deck—she was stabbed in the throat—and then came after you to tell you. Then the schooner broke away while I was coming. She's drifting out to sea now."

"Where is she? Where is she?"

"Who—the girl, the schooner—which one? The girl is on the schooner, and the schooner—that's her, right there—she's drifting out to sea."

Wilbur put both hands to his temples, closing his eyes.

"I'll go back!" exclaimed Hodgson. "We'll have the surf boat out and get after her. We'll bring the body back!"

"No, no!" cried Wilbur. "It's better—this way. Leave her; let her go; she's going out to sea—out to sea again!"

"But the schooner won't live two hours outside in this weather. She'll go down."

"It's better—that way. Let her go. I want it so."

"I can't stay; I can't stay here!" said the other. "There's a storm coming up, and I've got to be at my station."

Wilbur did not answer. He was watching the schooner.

"I can't stay!" cried the other again. "If the patrol should signal—I can't stop here; I must be on duty. Come back; you can't do anything!"

"No!"

"I have got to go!" Hodgson ran back, swung himself on the horse and rode away at a furious gallop, inclining his head against the gusts.

And the schooner in a world of flying spray, white scud and driving spoondrift, her cordage humming, her forefoot churning, the flag at her peak straining stiff in the gale, came up into the narrow passage of the Golden Gate, riding high upon the outgoing tide. On she came, swinging from crest to crest of the waves that kept her company and that ran to meet the ocean, shouting and calling out beyond there under the low, scudding clouds.

Wilbur had climbed to the top of the old fort. Erect upon its granite ledge he stood and watched and waited.

Not once did the Bertha Millner falter in her race. Like an unbitted horse, all restraint shaken off, she ran free toward the ocean as to her pasture land. She came nearer, nearer, rising and rolling with the seas, her bowsprit held due west, pointing like a finger out to sea to the west—out to the world of romance. And then at last, as the little vessel drew opposite the old fort and passed not a hundred yards away, Wilbur, watching from the rampart, saw Moran lying upon the deck with outstretched arms and calm, upturned face; lying upon the deck of that lonely fleeing schooner as upon a bed of honor, still and calm, her great braids smooth upon her breast, her arms wide; alone with the sea—alone in death as she had been in life. She passed out of his life as she had come into it—alone upon a derelict ship abandoned to the sea. She went out with the tide, out with the storm; out, out, out to the great gray Pacific that knew her and loved her and that shouted and called for her and thundered in the joy of her as she came to meet him like a bride to meet a bridegroom.

"Goodby, Moran!" shouted Wilbur as she passed. "Goodby, goodby, Moran! You were not for me—not for me! The ocean is calling for you, dear. Don't you hear him? Don't you hear him? Goodby, goodby, goodby!"

The schooner swept by, shot like an arrow through the swirling currents of the Golden Gate and dipped and bowed and courtesied to the Pacific that reached toward her his myriad curling fingers. They infolded her, held her close and drew her swiftly, swiftly out to the great, heaving bosom, tumultuous and beating in its mighty joy, its savage exultation of possession.

Wilbur stood watching. The little schooner lessened in the distance, became a shadow in mist and flying spray, a shadow moving upon the face of the great waste of water. Fainter and fainter she grew, vanished, reappeared, was heaved up again, a mere speck upon the western sky, a speck that dwindled and dwindled, then slowly melted away into the gray of the horizon.

THE END.

DUCKS WERE DECEITFUL.

Ingenious Fraud Practiced by the Heathen Chinee.

The ingenuity of the Chinaman is wonderful, surpassing at times the belief of his European and American brothers. A striking instance of it, not unmixed with guile, was brought to light recently during the trading transactions of two foreigners at Boone Road market.

This husband and wife, having decided that duck should figure on the menu of the day, went the round of the market in search of a fat, plump, well flavored bird.

After awhile two were purchased. They were beautifully dressed ducks, young, but plump, and promised to show up well at the evening table.

When the domestic pair got home the lady chanced to puncture one of the birds with a sharp knife, and it collapsed like a toy balloon. The other, subjected to similar treatment, followed suit. Their erstwhile inflated bodies became flat and bony and mere ghosts of the ducks that had been bought.

Investigation showed that a thin piece of wire had been fastened round the birds' necks and elsewhere, and everything pointed to the conclusion that the ducks had been blown up with a bicycle pump.

How the ducks had been drawn and then made to stand the strain of the air pump is evidently an oriental trade secret.

When the young couple again go shopping for ducks they will take a skewer along with them.—Shanghai Times.

Stewed Snapper.

"Stewed snapper," said the proprietor of a restaurant that makes a specialty of the toothsome dish, "is almost as distinctively Philadelphian as scrapple and pepper pot. Prepared by the same formula as terrapin, with a liberal seasoning of sherry, snapper is quite as palatable as the diamond back, provided the meat comes from a young turtle. In fact, I defy any one but an epicure to tell the difference. The snappers that come to Philadelphia are mostly caught in the muddy bottomed creeks that flow into the Delaware up the Jersey side, and just now they are coming in very plentifully. The snapper is a difficult catch to handle, but the Jerseymen know how to turn the trick and get them to market alive. They run in weight from four pounds all the way up to forty pounds, the smaller ones being naturally more tender and consequently better meat. Some few are shipped to Trenton and New York, but most of them come to Philadelphia."—Philadelphia Record.

Making a Will.

Always call in a lawyer to make a will. If one cannot be procured then write your wishes in the simplest words you can. Never try to use what you may consider "legal terms." Few persons realize how difficult it is to make a will. A classic example is the celebrated Lord St. Leonards, at one time lord chancellor of England. He was the foremost conveyancer of his day, and yet when he died an informal will was found in his coat pocket, hurriedly written when he was at the point of death. This will occupied the courts for years and served "to point a moral and adorn a tale."

Comforting.

A man who had buried three wives took to himself a fourth lately, and, as is wont in Lancashire, the pair went for a walk one Sunday afternoon. On the way they called at the cemetery where the three former wives reposed in the one grave. The new wife read the inscriptions with some interest, but her feelings may well be imagined when she came to the usual text from the Scriptures. It ran. "Be ye also ready."—London Standard.

Polly—Yes; and I promised to marry him.

"Did he ask your father's permission?"

"Yes; he said he would ask papa to indorse my promissory note."

Not His Kind.

"Would you die for me?" she asked dreamily.

"Oh, say," he retorted in a matter of fact way, "if you haven't any more ambition than to be looking for dead ones you're not the girl for me!"—Chicago Post.

The Bellefonte Central's Excellent Report.

The New York News Bureau make the following comment on the annual report of the Bellefonte Central Railroad.

The thirteenth annual report of the Bellefonte Central Railroad is about as complete a publication of its kind as it has ever been the pleasure of this Bureau to read.

Details of the operations of the road are so thoroughly covered in the report that the stockholder is enabled, at a glance, to know, not only the exact status of the property in which he is interested, but also the manner in which practically every dollar of expense was diverted. In truth he is made as fully acquainted with the current improvements and progress of the road and the condition of its rolling stock and motive power as if he had covered the ground by a personal inspection.

While it would be impossible for a larger corporation to go so largely into intricate, details, the little Bellefonte report should serve as an object lesson to other corporations who exist by the subscriptions of their shareholders but deny the latter all but the most meagre of information, apparently regarding them as a detriment rather than as the foundation of the upbuilding of the company, and to whom they are compelled to turn in days of trouble or embarrassement.

The Bellefonte Central operates between Bellefonte and Pine Grove Mills, Pa. The capitalization is $500,000 par $50. No dividends have ever been paid but it is intimated that a disbursement may be made this year.

The directors are well known Philadelphians &c.

A lazy liver may be a tired liver, or a starved liver. A stick is all right for the back of a lazy man. But it would be a savage as well as a stupid thing to beat a weary man or a starving man because he lagged in his work. So in treating the lagging liver it is a great mistake to lash it with drastic drugs. In ninety-nine cases out of a hundred a torpid or sluggish liver is but a symptom of an ill-nourished body, whose organs are weary with overwork. Let your liver alone. Start with the stomach and its allied organs of digestion and nutrition. Put them in proper working order, and see how quickly your liver will become active and energetic. Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery has made many marvelous cures of "liver trouble" by its wonderful control of the organs of digestion. It restores the normal activity of the stomach, increases the secretions of the blood making glads, cleanses the system from poisonous accumulations and so relieves the liver of the burdens imposed upon it by the defection of other gorans.

Planing Mill at Jersey Shore Burned.

The planing mill known as the J. M. Chestnut mill at Jersey Shore, was completely destroyed by fire Thursday morning about 1 o'clock. It is not known how the fire started. The loss is estimated at $12,000 with $6,000 insurance. The mill was located in Bickneli's addition. It was incorporated under the name of the J. M. Chestnut mill, but was the property of Frank Ulmer and Dr. G. E. Bastian, of Salladasburg. Camerer and Lambert, were running the mill, having bought the stock and leased it last August for a year.

Bass Season Will Open on June 15.

On June 15 the bass season will open. This season formerly opened on May 30, but under the new law it was made two weeks later. The fact that the sunfish family, under the new statute, are protected, should be remembered. There is no specified prohibited size relative to sunfish but they are protected as to season, which opens on June 15. No rock bass under five inches in length must be taken, the law requiring that all under this size be thrown back immediately. No black bass under seven inches can be kept.

Married at Moshannon.

A quiet but very pretty wedding was celebrated Friday at the home of the bride in Moshannon. The contracting parties were Jacob W. Hazzard and Maude E. Harshberger, both of Moshannon. The ceremony was performed by Rev. H. J. Schuchart, pastor of the Methodist church at Snow Shoe. Only the immediate families were present. The bride and groom are estimable young people and this paper wishes them much joy and happiness in their newly wedded life.

May Re-Model Church.

The members of the United Evangelical church are figuring over the cost of remodeling their church in Centre Hall. The structure is a two story frame, and the wish of the congregation apparently is to reduce it to a one story building, add a vestibule and cut the main audience room into two parts to be used for auditorium and Sunday school room. The plan is a good one, and would greatly improve the appearance of the property.

South African Lecture.

The lecture delivered at the Court House on last Friday evening, by Rev. C. M. Tanner D. D., of South Africa, was quite entertaining of great interest and full of instruction. He introduced his subject by giving a short historical sketch of the discovery of Africa. Stating that it was discovered in 1486 or about the same time as the discovery of America. He then spoke of the different tribes among which were the Hottentots and Zulues.

He spoke also of the colored people of South Africa and said they like the Africo-Americans were all shades and complexions. He attributed this to the fact that they (the colored people) were the off-springs of the foreign whites and natives. He then told the congregation that if it were possible for them to be taken out of this country and placed in Capetown or any other city in South Africa without their knowledge of the change, that when they come to themselves, they would not be able to say whether they were in Africa or some large city in America.

He said all the modern convenience such as electric lights, trolley cars, bicycles, automobiles and all other modern devices and inventions that are in America are in the large cities of Africa. But he informed them also that in the rural districts as you journeyed between these cities was where you noticed the difference. In his lecture he claimed that while his church is doing a great work among the natives having turned in the last eight years about 15,000 to the Christian faith, yet there are two great obstacles in their way. The first being the plural marriages and the other the Hoodo doctor.

The natives do not seem willing to give up their wives, or rather to the contrary. The wives are not willing to give up their husbands, claiming that if they were compelled to leave their husbands they would not have support for themselves or children. The Dr. claims that owing to the war like condition of these heathen tribes in the past the women are far in the majority of the men in numbers, thus this condition of affairs may account for the number of wives to each husband.

The hoodo doctor is another hindrance to the success of the work, as he has such an influence among the natives that they believe that if he is against them they can expect nothin but reverses, yet this is not strange for even among our people in the south in slavery times there were those who believed other could and did conjure or put spells on them.

The thing which puzzled the Doctor, is that the Hoodo doctors have never been able to put a spell on the missionaries, why the Hoodo southern colored people where unable to operate on their master and why since the fortune teller was able to tell others where and how to get $1,000 for the small sum of 50 cents, did not go and get it herself.

At the close of his lecture the Doctor exhibited some native curios and sold a number of his South African papers which he brought with him from that country.

The Doctor together with Rev. J. E. Morris, of this city, are attending the trustee board of commencement exercises at Wilberforce this week of which the latter is a member.

YES OR NO?

Bellefonte people are respectfully asked to answer these questions.

Is there anything in the evidence of one's senses?

Is there anything in the testimony of one's friends?

Can reliance be placed upon statements from people we know.

Are the opinions of local citizens of any greater moment than those of strangers?

Would you sooner believe people living in some far-away place than citizens of your own city.

We think not for home proof can easily be investigated.

Curtis Johnson of 583 Bishop street freight truckman says: I had backache and lameness across my loins for a year or more. "At times the lameness was so acute I could lift nothing and if I stooped it was impossible for me to straighten. When driving there was a steady aching over my kidneys the whole time and I had a dull tired feeling which took away all my ambition. I procured Doan's Kidney Pills from F notts Green drug store and they soon cured me from the whole combination of troubles and they did it quickly and thoroughly. My wife was also suffering from a tired grinding backache and she used Doan's Kidney Pills and invigorated her generally. She now speaks of them as highly as I do. We never came across any remedy which surpassed Doan's Kidney Pills.

Knights Templar Conclave.

The Knights Templar who will attend the Triennial Conclave in San Francisco next September, and all those who will accompany them on that pilgrimage, may look for the most cordial reception and the most lavish entertainment ever offered by any community to a gathering of this kind. The Californians—all the Californians—have been studying, planning and preparing for the coming event for the past three years, and their plans are of such stupendous and gigantic nature, as to eclipse any entertainment ever attempted by a fraternity, or even a whole community. San Francisco is peculiarly adapted for a great demonstration, parade, drill, or any out-of-door exercises or gatherings, because the weather may be relied upon for fully eight months in the year. Even on the way and before reaching San Francisco, the pilgrims will be met at the depots where the trains stop, and given an ovation. Committees will meet each incoming train on approaching the city by the Golden Gate, and accompany the travelers to their destination. The escort on arrival at the depot, by mounted and unmounted details of Sir Knights in uniform, with unfurled banners and bands of music, will be quite a feature. The city will be ablaze with lights that will make night brighter than mid-day. The decorations will surpass those of any city on the continent in attractiveness. The Grand Commandery of California will entertain at the Palace Hotel, and California Commandery, No. 1, together with other Commanderies, will keep continuous open house in the Mechanics' Pavilion, a structure that will accommodate 15,000 people. An exhibit of California's wealth, from valley and hills, mines and orchards, vineyards, forests and field, will be installed beneath the same roof. The entertainment will include free excursions on ocean liners around the Bay of San Francisco, to all the points of interest, and outside the heads as far as the Farallone Islands steaming around the Seal Rocks, the harbor fortifications, United States Arsenal, Naval Training School, the shipbuilding plants, and famous ironworks; trolley rides to Golden Gate Park, with its hundreds of acres in flowers at all seasons, its great conservatory, aviary, zoo, lake and the museum containing the rarest treasures on the American continent; the Sutro Baths, the largest under a glass roof anywhere; the Cliff House, built on a perpendicular cliff overhanging the open beach of the Pacific Ocean. All these are free to all visitors. Chinatown, a real part of the Celestial Empire, right in the heart of an American city; the offices, pressrooms and editorial department of the only Chinese newspaper published outside of China; nightly performances of a troop of Celestial actors and a Chinese orchestra, and one thousand and one other novel sights, startling to the visitor, but common to California. The famed natural wonders of California, surpassing in grandeur the great sights of the rest of the globe, can be reached within one day's journey, and at a nominal cost, and while not entirely free, the expense is within the means of almost everybody who comes to California. Living is cheaper in California than anywhere else on earth, and it is much better for the same price. San Francisco is preparing to house comfortably 200,000 visitors, share with them the ample blessings of the Golden State at a nominal expense, and make them wish that they could tarry forever.

The Busy Burglar.

Indifferent to the law and its officers, the burglar is swinging around the circle more busily than ever. He is proving himself a men of magnificent distances, for when the through with one region he puts many miles behind him before he sets to work again, and he is profiting immensely by the consternation the uncertainly of movements occasions. His recent depredations have been so many and have covered so wide an extent of territory that no section of the countryside can lie down in peace at night.

The present season of lawlessness has reached a crucial stage. The burglar follows too desperate a calling to allow sentiment to figure in its pursuit. It is probable that he prefers to go about his business without recourse to violence, for when he is in a cornor he must share the danger of the encounter, but in a pinch he will not stop at murder to save himself. Falls Creek, DuBois and Julian furnished proof enough this week that the burglar's game is one at which he must win, no matter what means he must employ to insure his success. He makes his living outside the pale of moral and legal convention, and his methods are in keeping.

When lives are put in danger the time for ordinary measures on the part of the authorities is past. The loss of property is now beyond remedy, but there can be no compeneaton for death. The public safety is the first duty of the officials, and when it is jeopardized extraordinary action is necessary. It is but a step farther to a great tragedy, and this must be escaped at every cost.—Exchange.

CHEERFUL WOMEN.

How to Keep Happy.

DESPONDENCY is a thing of evil origin and evil results. Worry produces nothing but wrinkles and wretchedness. Let the reader put up a little note on her bureau, on her desk, and at the head of her bed, just two words, DON'T WORRY. Worry is the greatest foe to the happiness of any household. An anxious, despondent face, a fretful, complaining voice, will make every one uncomfortable.

A woman's nerves are more truly the cause of worry than outside troubles. The nerves are to a woman's body the telegraph system, which surely warns her of any trouble in the feminine make-up.

WHY WOMEN HAVE 'NERVES.'

"That is the reason why women have 'nerves.' When our thoughts begin to grow cloudy and uncertain, our impulses lag and the warnings of pain and distress are sent like flying messages throughout our limbs and frame, we straightway, nine times in ten, lay the cause of the trouble to some defect in the point where we first feel it. Is it a headache, a backache, a sensation of irritability or twitching and uncontrollable nervousness, something must be wrong with the head or back, a woman naturally says, but all the time the real trouble very often centers in the womanly organs. In nine cases out of ten the seat of the difficulty is here, and a woman should take rational treatment for its cure. The local disorder and inflammation of the delicate special organs of the sex should be treated steadily and systematically."

Dr. Pierce, during a long period of practice, found that a prescription made up entirely of roots and herbs, without the use of alcohol, cured over ninety per cent. of such cases. After using this remedy for many years in his private practice he put it up in a form that would make it easily procurable, and it can be had at any store where medicines are handled.

$500 REWARD FOR WOMEN WHO CANNOT BE CURED.

Backed up by over a third of a century of remarkable and uniform cures, a record such as no other remedy for the diseases and weaknesses peculiar to women ever attained, the proprietors and makers of Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription now feel fully warranted in offering to pay $500 in legal money of the United States, for any case of Leucorrhea, Female Weakness, Prolapsus, or Falling of Womb which they cannot cure. All they ask is a fair and reasonable trial of their means of cure.

They have the most remarkable record of cures made by this world-famed remedy ever placed to the credit of any preparation especially designed for the cure of woman's peculiar ailments.

Sick women, especially those suffering from diseases of long standing, are invited to consult Dr. Pierce by letter, free. All correspondence is held as strictly private and sacredly confidential. Address Dr. R. V. Pierce, Buffalo, N. Y.

"I write these few lines to let you know that I am using your 'Favorite Prescription,' and the good it has done me," says Mrs. Timothy Bourgeois, of Tobique Narrows, New Bruns. "I was troubled with headache and stomach trouble, also other female weakness. Having read a great deal about your cures I concluded to try the medicine, so my husband purchased a bottle of 'Favorite Prescription.' I was no time taking it before I felt better. Cannot thank you enough for the good it has done me. I hope others may be benefited by its use as I have been."

"I can strongly recommend Dr. Pierce's medicines, especially the 'Favorite Prescription' and 'Golden Medical Discovery,' writes Mrs. Clara Gardner, of Rainey, Mo. "I suffered from nervous debility, brought on by hard work and trouble. Had suffered several years; was growing weaker gradually, not only in body but in mind also. I began taking your medicine last spring. Commenced to improve from the start, and by the time I had taken twelve bottles, six of the 'Favorite Prescription' and six of the 'Golden Medical Discovery,' felt that I was well enough to get along without medicine. Was like a different woman and would not have been in the condition I was before taking the medicines, for a hundred dollars. Am well and hearty now, and if I ever need medicine again, will certainly take Dr. Pierce's."

War News.

ST. PETERSBURG, June 11.—The Japanese have taken Siu-Yen, driving out the Russians. The enemy appears to be advancing on Hsi-Cheng.

ST. PETERSBURG, June 11.—News of the fighting at Siu-Yen furnished food Friday for considerable speculation regarding the real Japanese objective. Whether the advance to Siu-Yen constitutes a forward movement in force, military authorities here do not pretend to know. Its character depends largely upon whether General Kuroki has the number of troops with which reports credit him. If he has, it is considered possible that the Japanese may attempt to push across the peninsula and establish a new base at New Chwang.

The direct road to New Chwang passes south to Haicheng. Such a movement on the part of General Kuroki might precipitate a serious engagement in the neighborhood of Hai-Cheng, if General Kuropatkin considered the time ripe to contest the advance seriously.

But it is also pointed out that the Japanese movements to Siamatza and Siu-Yen may be either feints or merely a continuation of an effort to distract the Russian attention from Port Arthur.

LONDON, June 11.—(3 o'clock Saturday) —The Daily Mail asserts:

"Two infernal machines were found on the night of June 7 concealed in tobacco boxes in the Tsarkoye Selo palace, where the Russian Emperor is now residing. One of the machines was in the dining room, the other in the audience chamber. The mechanism in each was working when discovered.

"The strictest secrecy is observed, and this statement, although true in every detail, is sure to be categorically denied."

THE REPUBLICAN COUNTY CONVENTION

Tuesday's Republican convention was the largest and most enthusiastic in many years. Promptly at eleven o'clock Colonel W. F. Reeder called the assembled delegates to order and the roll call showed only one absentee, every seat in the auditorium was filled and almost every precinct in the county was represented in the audience.

The only close contest over the offices to be filled was that on members of the legislature. John A. Daley made a hard clean fight for the nomination but the new party rules held the delegates to their instructions for both first and second choice and John L. Knisely needed only seven votes outside of his instructed delegates while Daley was ten behind him. The returns showed that nearly one-third of the usual Republican vote had been cast at the primaries, and unusually large number at any time, and that each candidate nominated on the ticket had received a clear majority, thus, under the new rules, the wishes of the people as indicated by their instructions governed the action of the convention.

Judge John G. Love was cheered to the echo when he appeared to respond to repeated calls from the convention. In a brief though forcible statement he swept aside the Democratic allegations of a partizan judiciary and expressed his thanks to the delegates for his nomination in a few well chosen words. The speech of Clement Dale, Esq., nominating Judge Love for re-election, was most excellent and held the individed attention of his audience.

The ticket selected on Tuesday, from top to bottom, should commend itself to a united Republican party as well as to every voter in the county who would be glad to see those offices filled with the best material.

For County Surveyor D. W Pletcher, of Howard, will make an excellent official. No one doubts his ability and we feel sure of his election next November.

In the Republican legislative ticket the voters of Centre County have two men that they can rely on. Philip E. Womelsdorf has served Centre county in the legislature before with fidelity and honor and will do so again. In big hearted John Knisely, the laboring men have a champion to be proud of. A working man himself he knows their needs and is big enough and brave enough to stand up for them.

H. H. Harshberger Esq., will make an excellent District Attorney Mr. Runkle his opponent is a very nice young man but the nomination of Harshberger settles the aspirations of Runkle for the District Attorneyship beyond question.

For twelve years George E. Lamb of Philipsburg, has been a faithful and hard working member of the Republican County committee and he certainly deserves and no doubt will receive the hearty support of his party at the polls next November.

At last we have the the reason for Orvis's nomination as Judge. The Democratic papers of this county have been discreet, but the Clearfield Republican has let the cat out of the bag. In its last issue it stated that Orvis "is much stronger than his party." This should please the Meyer following. Is Orvis so much superior to his fellow Democrats simply because he bolted the ticket when Bryan was a candidate? This is a question to be answered by Democrats who have always been regular.

WASHINGTON LETTER

(From Our Regular Correspondent.)

Washington, D. C., June, 14, 1904.

The present week has been a very busy one at the White House, and in the Executive departments. People who talk with the President come away impressed with the detailed information he possesses in regard to the political situation in the several states, especially New York, Indiana and Illinois. The landing of the United States marines at Tangier, ostensibly to protect a foreign legation, ves satisfaction. Secy. Hay finds ample precedent for so doing. He may further find a precedent for landing marines to protect American citizens. It will be a lame conclusion of the whole matter if Mr. Perdicaris is allowed to die in captivity. All matters pertaining to the Chicago Convention are now arranged. The President will allow neither liquors nor refreshments to be sold in the convention hall. The gentlemen who are to make nominating speeches have been chosen. It has been decided to present Senator Fairbank's name to convention for Vice President. Ex. Senator Walcott of Colorado is the man who will set the ball rolling for Fairbanks. Mr. Isoda, Commissioner to the St. Louis Fair, has called to see the President. Being asked why physically the Japanese are so small, Mr. Isoda, said it was the result of over study. It is a little remarkable that there are so few stunted men in the United States. The President has appointed Mr. D. J. Murphy, once Commissioner of Pensions, under Cleveland, to be Secretary to the Panama Canal Commission. Mr. Murphy is a Knight of Columbus, and was the editor of a Catholic weekly. Today the President received for the city a statue of Dr. Benj. Rush of Revolutionary fame, which was unveiled in front of the Naval Observatory Building. The usual program of music, and speeches was carried out. Dr. Rush was a man who went about doing good, and who held the position of physician in chief to the American army. For many years he was a professor in the University of Pennsylvania.

The once famous case of Rebecca Taylor, who was dismissed from the War Department because she wrote a newspaper article reflecting upon the policy and character of the President, has at last been settled. She claimed that she was unjustly removed, and asked for a writ of mandamus compelling her reinstatement. The court of appeals of this District has now decided that regardless of the merits of the case the courts have no jurisdiction. The right of appointment carries with it the right of removal. There is no contract. Any clerk may be dismissed at any time for any cause. Civil Service simply keeps out the crowd; it doesn't protect a clerk when once an appointment has been made.

Secretary Shaw has thought fit to remind the rather theatrical World's Fair President that if the first installment of $500,000 due the United States Treasury, is not promptly paid on the 15th inst., he will be forced to take charge of the gate receipts. Mr. Francis replies that every penny will be paid on the date when it falls due. He thinks the East does not appreciate the "magnitude" of the St Louis Exposition.

Many members of the American Medical Association, recently in session at Atlantic City, are in town to attend the unvailing of the statue of Dr. Benj. Rush. They are discussing an unexpected and startling paper read by Dr. Anders of Philadelphia, on the "Danger in Strenuous Life." This does not refer to politics but to certain incurable diseases, such as the stiffening and deterioration of the arteries, as the result of overwork. It was stated that a large number of athletes are victims of these ailments as a result of the strenuous life, and that many young men are as decrepit as men of 70. The doctors say parents should be warned against the results of foot-ball, tests of strength, and over indulgence in Prof. Atwater's "Alcoholic food." The rooting of fans on the bleaches is not strenuous; it is simply idiotic.

Since the verdict of "not guilty," in the Tyner-Barrett case, the Government has decided to drop the remaining indictments against H. J. Barrett, nephew of the General. He was, among other things, accused of bribery, but it was shown during the late trial, that a certain fee of $800 which he received, was paid after he left the government service.

One of the never tiring and very busy men living in this city, is the affable, white-whiskered John W. Foster, once Secretary of State and Minister to all the barbarian nations outside of the United States. He still manages to act as attorney for many of the philanthropic, benevolent Christian, missionary and eleemosynary societies in this country. Monday he interviewed Secretary Hay regarding the claims of American missionaries against the Turkish Government. Mr. Foster thinks with our large fleet now in European waters the time is propitions, after we have skinned the Sultan of Morocco, to sail down to Stamboul and set the Sultan of Turkey trembling on his throne. Very likely a precedent will be found for doing this very thing.

The famous Columbian University of this city will hereafter be known as the George Washington University. This change of names rather upsets the college yell business. Besides it would be undignified to connect the name of the Father of his country with some silly rhyme.

Speaker Cannon may be considered entirely out of the Vice Presidential possibilities. Even if the President's preference for Senator Fairbanks should not materialize, Uncle Jo will not be dragooned into accepting it. He was never built for a mere display office. He was surrounded by his old friends here Monday, and, to their protestations said vehemently: "I don't want it; I won't take it. If I were elected to it in spite of myself, I would go up there and take the oath. Then I would appoint a private secretary and a messenger and a telephone clerk, and go away and never go near the blankety-blank chamber again to be humiliated." Uncle Jo is eminently exuberantly social but he is never social for show.

DUCKS WERE DECEITFUL.

Ingenious Fraud Practiced by the Heathen Chinee.

The ingenuity of the Chinaman is wonderful, surpassing at times the belief of his European and American brothers. A striking instance of it, not unmixed with guile, was brought to light recently during the trading transactions of two foreigners at Boone Road market.

This husband and wife, having decided that duck should figure on the menu of the day, went the round of the market in search of a fat, plump, well flavored bird.

After awhile two were purchased. They were beautifully dressed ducks, young, but plump, and promised to show up well at the evening table.

When the domestic pair got home the lady chanced to puncture one of the birds with a sharp knife, and it collapsed like a toy balloon. The other, subjected to similar treatment, followed suit. Their erstwhile inflated bodies became flat and bony and mere ghosts of the ducks that had been bought.

Investigation showed that a thin piece of wire had been fastened round the birds' necks and elsewhere, and everything pointed to the conclusion that the ducks had been blown up with a bicycle pump.

How the ducks had been drawn and then made to stand the strain of the air pump is evidently an oriental trade secret.

When the young couple again go shopping for ducks they will take a skewer along with them.—Shanghai Times.

COLONEL MONROE

The Lincolnville Philosopher Claims That American Railways Are Behind In the March of Progress

By FREDERICK UPHAM ADAMS

Copyright, 1903, by Frederick Upham Adams

COLONEL MONROE was not in the best of humor on this particular evening. He responded curtly to Postmaster Jenkins' greeting and smoked in gloomy silence until Judge Sawyer entered the room.

"You look worn out, colonel," he said as he shook hands. "Have you been ill?"

"I am recovering slowly from a railroad trip," responded the colonel wearily.

"I did not know that you had been out of Lincolnville."

"Business called me to Franklin," explained Colonel Monroe. "It's only a hundred miles, to be sure, but any distance on a modern railroad is an ordeal. The service on the M. N. and W. is an outrage. The train was behind time, as usual, and more than normally crowded. We missed connections at Edwards and had to wait an hour and a half. The cars were filled with smoke and cinders. On the return trip a hot box delayed us another hour, and a stalled freight train filled the full measure of our woes by holding us up until dark. Dejected, dirty and disgusted, I was thankful when we finally pulled into Lincolnville."

"A hundred years ago you would have been thankful if you had a chance to travel 200 miles between sunrise and sunset," declared Postmaster Jenkins.

"I am not living a hundred years ago," said the colonel shortly. "There is this difference between the people who lived 100 years ago and those who live now—they did the best they could with the facilities at their command, and in several instances I can name we do the worst we dare. There is nothing in the records to show that the average stage company of a hundred years ago was indifferent to the safety or comfort of its patrons, a charge which can be proved against the M. N. and W. and other roads I can name."

"Nevertheless we have made wonderful progress in railroading," said Judge Sawyer. "You are prejudiced this evening because of a disagreeable and unusual experience, but you must admit that we are steadily advancing in the science of transportation."

"Not in the railroad branch of transportation," asserted Colonel Monroe, with emphasis. "For twenty years or more the passenger service on American railroads has stood still or retrograded. You look surprised. Name to me some of the improvements which have been made in that space of time. Have train speeds been increased? They have not. A study of the old time tables will show that in most cases there has been no increase in speeds except for special trains on which extra and exorbitant fares are charged. The ordinary passenger traveled from New York to Chicago in about the same time as now, and my recollection is that he traveled cheaper. There are a few trains fitted up with the common adjuncts of civilization, and this is regarded as a wonderful thing. By paying a ridiculously high fare and by bribing a clique of employees an energetic and tactful man can obtain as good service on a train as he can in an ordinary $2.50 a day hotel. For a generation we have stood in open mouthed wonder and adulation over the fact that it is possible to eat and sleep on a railroad train. To my mind it would have been much more remarkable if the contrary had developed. The most wonderful thing about the passenger branch of our railway service is the confirmed Bourbonism of its administration, the stupidity of its policy and the patience and tolerance of its patrons."

"You must have had an awful time today," laughed Judge Sawyer. "I notice that the M. N. and W. manages to pay dividends regularly, and, while the passengers may have cause for complaints, the stockholders certainly have none."

"The M. N. and W. lost money on its passenger service last year and, for that matter, for every year since it was organized," returned Colonel Monroe. "Four roads out of five have the same history and will continue to lose money until they improve their service. Those persons who are in any way conversant with railway finance are aware of the fact that, as a rule, the revenues from the freight traffic have to meet the deficit from the passenger department. It has also been thoroughly established that the higher the passenger rate the smaller the receipts and the lower the rates the larger the revenue. Despite this acknowledged truth the railway companies persist in holding rates as near the prohibitory point as the law will permit."

"There must be some good business reason for such policy," said Judge Sawyer. "Our railroad managers are reputed to be among the wisest and most shrewd of our executives. They certainly should know their business, and I believe they do."

"What you say is partly true, but it is not to the point," returned Colonel Monroe. "We undoubtedly have the best railroad men in the world, but unfortunately these men do not dictate the management of these vast properties. Twenty or thirty years ago our railroads were conducted for the benefit of their stockholders. In order to pay dividends it was found good policy to cater to the needs and wishes of the patrons of these roads. As a rule the officials were heavily interested personally in the stocks and looked for increased incomes from improved service and added traffic. Each road had one or more competitors, and each management was on the lookout for any new invention or suggestion which would give an advantage over its rival or rivals. As a consequence, inventors found a fruitful field for their genius in seeking to increase speeds, promote comfort or effect economies. It was in the period from 1865 to 1885 that American railroads made their greatest progress. This was an era of construction and of legitimate effort on the part of the financial interests which were in control of railway properties. The railroad magnate of those years was a great business man, who attained success by catering to the ever increasing demands of the country traversed by his tracks. He was personally acquainted with the leading merchants and farmers, and had ears and eyes for their demands and complaints. Those days have passed—probably forever."

"I have not noticed any radical change in railroad management," declared Judge Sawyer after a pause. "In many instances the same men are at the head of railroads as twenty or more years ago. Take the M. N. and W., for instance. Mr. Newcome is president and has been for more than a generation."

"Yes, and President Newcome has about as much to say about the affairs of the M. N. and W. as I have to say about your bank loans, and that is nothing," responded Colonel Monroe. "Years ago Mr. Newcome was the principal stockholder and the active head of affairs. Today he does not hold a share of stock and is simply a figurehead for the syndicate which controls M. N. and W. The road is combined with all of its former rivals. It is operated from Wall street, by Wall street and for Wall street. I am personally acquainted with Mr. Newcome and enjoy his confidence. I am not violating it when I say that he does not know who owns the M. N. and W. and does not care. It is a branch of a branch of one of seven lines which have been merged into a syndicate controlling 20,000 miles of track. Stock has been issued to many times its value, and only an expert can say how many kinds of bonds are piled on top of it. The man supposed to be at the head of the combine never saw Lincolnville and probably never will see it. He could not draw a map of the road if he tried. He knows less of practical railroading than I do of the vegetation of Mars, and that is mighty little. But he knows all about the gambling value of stocks and bonds. He knows when to buy and when to sell. The N. M. and W. is one of the sections in the roulette wheel, one of the cards in the faro layout, and this great 'railroad magnate' is one of the owners of the game. He bears the same relation to commerce that a tomato worm does to the plant on which it feeds. There are times when he finds his interest in the success of the road, and there are others when he is fully satisfied with the reverse. He is a gambler who always knows which way the cards will fall. When the public has a furore of buying he sells them stocks; when the public is in a panic he is the great financier who stands under the market and restores public confidence."

"You don't mean Mr. J. Pierpont Morgan, do you?" asked Postmaster Jenkins in an awed half whisper.

"I have no particular man in mind," answered the colonel. "The point I am trying to make is that our railroads are and have been run by financiers for purposes of speculation—a polite word for gambling—and not by practical railroad men for the honest profits of the traffic. An attempt is being made at the present time to wring from the public by excessive freight and passenger charges a sufficient sum of money with which to keep up the pretense of paying dividends on stocks which have been watered over and over again. A time will come when these same men, having disposed of the bulk of their holdings, will profess great fear concerning the future of railway profits. Then a panic in these 'securities' will follow, with such incidents as bankruptcy, receiverships and reorganizations. With the money realized from former operations—'operations' is what Sam Weller would have called a 'tenderer word' for what some persons specify as robbery—these Wall street railroad men will again rescue us from the swamps of failure. I am not discussing the morality of this system. It is undoubtedly respectable, being profitable. The great mass of the American people are interested in railroads from the fact that they are compelled to patronize them. The average citizen is neither a stockholder nor a railway stock speculator. I think that it can be shown that Wall street's domination of these vast properties constitutes a most serious menace to our progress as a nation and our genius as a people."

A correction is required. The firemen's festival will be held on July 23rd and not June 23rd, a $20 couch will be chanced off at 10cts per chance, it is a beauty, the same is on exhibition at the Milesburg company's store, all are invited to give a helping hand.

On Saturday evening one of our young men tried to show, what a horseman he was and he did it to the full extent, he took his horse to water throwing both feet over the shoulders of the horse, started in full speed, the ground being rough and uneven, the horse stumbled and fell to the ground, throwing the rider headlong into Spring Creek, baptizing him according to the faith of his horsemanship. He was not aware of so many eyes looking at his actions, the scribe was one that witnessed the young man's watery grave for the time being, was not long being resurrected.

One of our young men with his sister spent an evening with a party of young folks, during their stay the young man seated himself between his lady love and sister, for a joke one of the party extinguished the light to take advantage of the darkness for a short season, the young man grabbed his sister in mistake, gave her a general hugging thinking he had his lady love, the sister keeping quiet until the lamp was touched with a match. The young man could be bought for a penny. "Don't mention your troubles I have enough of my own." He said.

The first team crosses bats with Peale at Peale Saturday. Peale has a strong team this year, having scalped Winburne and the strong team at Morrisdale one game, and should make a good proposition for our boys The people at home will not be without a game as Howard will play the Snow Shoe grays and Munson will play Clarence on the Snow Shoe diamond Saturday afternoon.

The Hot Air base ball team will furnish an exhibition game of base ball at the Union picnic at Oak Hill on the Fourth. They will play Potersdale.

A large audience witnessed the base ball game last Saturday between Winburne and our home team at this place. It proved to be the best game of the season up to the sixth inning when Winburne left the field on account of a decision rendered by the umpire. The score was 1-1 up to the sixth inning when an overthrow to third base cost the visiting team two runs. Winburne claimed that the coacher was too near the base and requested the umpire to replace the base runners to their former position. Upon the refusal of the umpire to reinstate the men, the visiting team refused to play and the game ended 1-3 favor of SnowShoe We know that much depends upon the fairness in which the officials umpire but can not see where the visiting team had any reason to dispute the judgment of the official in this game. But we can find an inkling into the cause when we consider their past record. They have played several games this season that were not finished on account of a dispute. In each of these disputed games they have been outclassed and quit in order not to be bested in a nine inning game. Such action is neither honorable nor just to the town they represent and is deplored by all true base ball enthusiasts. The home team batted well and Shay pitched his usual good game.

CENTRE HALL.

Children's day was observed with appropriate ceremonies by the Presbyterian and Lutheran Sabbath schools. The audience room of the former church was most beautifully decorated with the prettiest flowers and evergreens nature could afford. Arrested for Incendiarism.

Early in the spring the large barn on the farm of David Rothrock near Bellefonte was burned to the ground with all its contents. The circumstances were such as to indicate that the fire was of incendiary origin. Suspicion pointed to an Italian as the guilty party but there was not sufficient evidence to warrant an arrest. This Italian had just been released from jail on charges of which Mr. Rothrock was the prosecutor.

Some time Monday night an attempt was made to burn the farm house of Mr. Rothrock. The structure is of frame and has an ell. This part of the building was first saturated with oil and then set on fire. Neighbors however saw the blaze before it got rightly started and it was extinguished without serious damage. Previous to the fire a man was seen running away from the house.

An investigation on the part of the authorities led to the arrest of John Dominick Constance, the Italian who had the trouble with Mr. Rothrock in the spring. He was taken before Squire Harshberger, of Bellefonte, who committed him to jail to await trial at the August term of court.

COMMENCEMENT DAYS.

State College Celebrates Its 47th Annual Commencement.

The 47th commencement of the Pennsylvania State College was ushered in at that place Sunday with the baccalaureate sermon. The large and handsome Schwab auditorium was filled to its utmost capacity when Dr. Lawrence M. Colfelt, pastor of the Oxford Presbyterian church, Philadelphia, preached a splendid sermon on "Purpose in Life." His text was: "For me to live is Christ and to die is again."

Sunday evening Dr. Colfelt preached an eloquent sermon in the Presbyterian church at this place. There was a large attendance of interested listeners. Dr. Colfelt has lost none of his ability as an able pulpit orator as his effort Sunday night amply testified.

Monday evening the Junior Oratorical contest was held at State College. In the afternoon the Class Day exercises of the Class of 1904 were held and the annual athletic contest.

Mrs. Katherine Hartsock Williams.

On last Thursday afternoon about 3 o'clock, Mrs. Katherine Williams, wife of Abenego Williams died at her home near Martha Furnace.

The deceased has been a resident of that community from childhood.

She was nearly 55 years of age and for over 34 years she was a consistent member of the Baptist church.

The funeral took place Sunday morning when a large number of her friends and relatives came to pay the last tribute of respect to her. The services were conducted at the home of the deceased by her pastor Rev. A. C. Lathrop selecting as his funeral text, Rev. 14.13

Mrs. Williams was a devoted wife and faithful mother, continuously setting an example of a strong christian character. For many years she taught the primary class of the Baptist Sunday School and as a token of love and respect they followed in a body to her grave and all placing a rich bouquet of flowers upon her casket. While upon earth Mrs. Williams builded for herself a character which gave her a passport into a glorious future, fashioned a name that shall be fragrant in Heaven, while it will constitute a tower of strength in which those may shelter who are impressible by her example.

Besides her many friends and neighbors she leaves to mourn her loss, a husband and five children; Mrs. Susie Irwin wife of Dr. Irwin of Unionville, Mattie, Roland, Roger and Harry all of Martha and her brothers and sisters yet surviving her.

DISCOURAGED

The expression occurs so many times in letters from sick women to Dr. Pierce; "I was completely discouraged." And there is always good reason for the discouragement. Years of suffering. Doctor after doctor tried in vain. Medicines doing no lasting good. It is no wonder that the woman feels discouraged.

Thousands of these weak and sick women have found health and courage regained as the result of the use of Doctor Pierce's Favorite Prescription. It establishes regularity, dries unhealthy drains, heals inflammation and ulceration, and cures female weakness. It makes weak women strong and sick women well.

"In the year 1899 I was taken sick," writes Mrs. Edna Crowder, of Ripley, Lauderdale Co., Tenn. "My limbs ached, had severe pains in back and lower part of bowels, with difficulty in urination, and smarting and burning pain after. I tried many kinds of medicine and four of the best doctors in the country, until I gave up all hope of recovery. In January, 1901, I wrote to Dr. R. V. Pierce, of Buffalo, N. Y., and received from him a letter, telling me to try his medicines. I took eleven bottles, six of 'Favorite Prescription,' five of 'Golden Medical Discovery,' one vial of 'Pellets,' and used one box of 'Lotion Tablets' and one of 'Healing Suppositories,' and am now able to work at anything I want to. Thanks to you for your valuable medicine and kind advice."

Weak and sick women are invited to consult Dr. R. V. Pierce, by letter, free. All correspondence is held as strictly private and sacredly confidential. Address Dr. R. V. Pierce, Buffalo, N. Y.

Many Mentioned For Senator.

PHILADELPHIA, June 9.—After another long day of conferences among party leaders, candidates and other persons on the matter of filling the vacancy in the United States senate caused by the death of Senator Quay, the matter last night appeared to be as far from a solution as it has been at any time since the old leader died.

The candidates in the field are William A. Flynn, Francis Le Baron Robbins, president of the Pittsburg Coal company, one of the largest bituminous coal producing concerns in the country; former Attorney General John P. Elkin.

Leader Flynn is an especially strong candidate, but there is objections to him by some of the leaders in the eastern part of the state. The candidatcy of Robbins loomed up strongly Wednesday afternoon, principally through a visit paid to Senator Penrose by John Mitchell, president of the Mine Workers' union. President Mitchell and Mr. Robbins are very friendly, and as soon as Mr. Mitchell arrived a rumor became current that he came here in the interest of Mr. Robbins and that he brought with him the solid backing of a quarter of a million mine workers in this city.

Senator Penrose and Mr. Mitchell were together less than half an hour and after the conference was over the senator refused to talk. Mr. Mitchell, however, denied that he came here in the interest of any candidate for the senatorship.

Senator Penrose and Mr. Durham arrived here at noon from Harrisburg, where they went last night to confer with Gov. Pennypacker on the senatorial situation. After their arrival they called upon President A. J. Cassatt, of the Pennsylvania railroad, along with former Senator Don M. Cameron and Richard Quay.

Mr. Elkin did not see either Senator Penrose or Durham or did Mr. Robbins.

Senator Flinn, when seen regarding Mr. Knox's candidacy, admitted that he had met Mr. Frick during the day and that the latter asked that Mr. Knox be considered a candidate. Mr. Flinn further added that another meeting would be held today with Senator Penrose and Durham, at which the attorney general's name will be taken up.

It is believed that if President Roosevelt is willing to let Mr. Knox resign from the cabinet he will be acceptable to senator Penrose as his colleague in the senate. It will then be up to the Pittsburg leaders to agree upon him.

THE ACADEMY RECEPTION

Brilliant Social Event Which Marked the Close of the School Year.

Quite a brilliant social event transpired at the Bellefonte Academy Friday evening, it being the annual reception which take place each year at the end of the school term. The reception lasted from 7.30 until 10 o'clock and between four and five hundred people wended their way to the historic old school on the hill and there enjoyed the delightful social intercourse, drank in the enlivening music of Prof. Christy Smith's excellent orchestra and admired the beautiful and exquisite decorations and illuminations.

The students and their parents, members of the alumni and friends and patrons of the institution were represented among the number present. The scene when the reception was at its height was a brilliant and inspiring one. The grounds were illuminated with many Japanese lanterns. The porches and drawing rooms were handsomely decorated with bunting. Potted plants, flowers and great banks of laurel were placed in different parts of the rooms and porches. In every nook and corner cosy little tables were set and at these light refreshments were served, the waitresses being young ladies from Miss Hill's department.

The guests were met by the following ushers Messrs. Stanley Valentine, Thompson Henry, Mahaffey Ferguson and William Louder. Later they were presented to the reception committee which consisted of Mrs. James R. Hughes, Miss Helen Overton, Miss Isabelle Hill and Miss Kate Davis, Rev. James P. Hughes and his son, Prof. James R. Hughes greeted the guests cordially and everyone was made heartily welcome.

Among the guests present from a distance were Mrs. Thomas and daughter, of Mahanoy City; Mrs. Ferguson and daughter of Mahaffey; Mrs. Dr. Thompson, of Stormstown; Mrs. Henry, of Martha; Miss Daisy Graham, of Mt. Washington, Md.; Mrs. Frank P. Bassett, of Sparrows Point, Md.; Miss Budinger, Arthur Budinger, of Snow Shoe,

After the reception the young people held a dance in the Armory, the music being furnished by the Smith orchestra.

CASTORIA.
Bears the Signature of Chas. H. Fletcher. The Kind You Have Always Bought

Thought he Was in Hades.

An amusing incident occurred at the Milton iron works on Tuesday. An old fellow, possible 60 years of age, who had strayed from the straight and narrow path into the alluring realm of Bacchus, rounded up in a practically unconscious state at the mill about the middle of the afternoon. He laid down in front of one of the furnaces that was off duty and was soon oblivious to the world and his surroundings. He slept well into the night, and when he began to show signs of life and move about, one of the workmen went up and gave him a shake. "Waken up, old man." The old fellow grunted but did not quite come to. The iron worker gave him another shake, and he opened his eyes. All around him was the glare of the fires and the white hot metal, the smoke and the sulphurous fumes. Before him stood a man black and begrimed, naked to the waist. Directly in front of him, other black naked objects were poking a fiery furnace. He sat up and his hair stood out straight on his head, his eyes glared and his face wore a look of horror. The fellow asked, "Say, ol' man, where'd you come from?" With a despairing glance at the surroundings he said, "Oh, I lived at Lock Haven when I was on earth, and my God! never expected to get here." His eyes became riveted on the furnace and after a little while he said. "Please, mister, don't put me in there." Some one of the boys brought him a cup of water, and as the cool refreshing draught passed down his parched esophagus the light began to dawn on him, and he edged his way out into the night.—Milton Standard.

Narrowly Escaped Drowning.

The Lock Haven Express says: "Chas. Ulrich, an assistand at the Fallon house restaurant, came near drowning Friday. He went on the river in a canoe and while fixing the rudder of the boat toppled over into the water. He at once started to swim to the Lock Haven shore, being about the middle of the river when the accident occurred. Fortunately his predicament was discovered in time to send him assistance, and when the rescuers reached Mr. Ulrich he was pretty well exhausted."

Charles is a son of Mr. and Mrs. Geo. Ulrich, of Millheim, and has been living at Lock Haven for several years.

DO YOU GET UP WITH A LAME BACK?

Kidney Trouble Makes You Miserable.

Almost everybody who reads the newspapers is sure to know of the wonderful cures made by Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, the great kidney, liver and bladder remedy.

It is the great medical triumph of the nineteenth century; discovered after years of scientific research by Dr. Kilmer, the eminent kidney and bladder specialist, and is wonderfully successful in promptly curing lame back, kidney, bladder, uric acid troubles and Bright's Disease, which is the worst form of kidney trouble.

Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root is not recommended for everything but if you have kidney, liver or bladder trouble it will be found just the remedy you need. It has been tested in so many ways, in hospital work, in private practice, among the helpless too poor to purchase relief and has proved so successful in every case that a special arrangement has been made by which all readers of this paper who have not already tried it, may have a sample bottle sent free by mail, also a book telling more about Swamp-Root and how to find out if you have kidney or bladder trouble. When writing mention reading this generous offer in this paper and send your address to Dr. Kilmer & Co., Binghamton, N. Y. The regular fifty cent and dollar sizes are sold by all good druggists.

Don't make any mistake, but remember the name, Swamp Root, Dr. Kilmer's Swamp Root and the address on every bottle, Binghampton, N. Y.

Knox Chosen Senator.

PHILADELPHIA, June 10.—Announcement was made by the Republican leaders last night that Attorney General Philander C. Knox has been agreed upon as the successor to United States Senator M. S. Quay.

WASHINGTON, June 10.—It is known here that Attorney General Knox will accept the appointment of Senator to succeed Mr. Quay. He probably will not resign as Attorney General until Congress meets next December.

Just before Attorney General Knox left Washington a few days ago he called on the President and told him that he had been tendered the appointment of United States Senator to succeed Mr. Quay, and that if the President was willing he would accept.

The President told him that while it was true probably no other man in the country could quite fill the position of Attorney General as he had filled it, yet he believed that his services in the Senate would be exceptionally valuable, not only to the state of Pennsylvania, but to the whole country. The President said that during the next session or two of Congress it was a fair assumption that there would be considerable constructive legislation on the subject of trusts and combinations of one character or another, and in that matter Mr. Knox would be of greater service than perhaps any other man could be.

The President is greatly pleased that Mr. Knox will accept the position. The latter probably will not resign as Attorney General until Congress convenes next December.

Deafness Cannot be Cured.

by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, Deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by Catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars free.

For A Hundred Years.

For a hundred years or more Witch Hazel has been recognized as a superior remedy, but it remained for E. C. DeWitt & Co. of Chicago, to discover how to combine the virtues of Witch Hazel with other antiseptics, in the form of a salve. DeWitt's Witch Hazel Salve is the best salve in the world for sores, cuts, burns, bruises and piles. The high standing of this salve has given rise to counterfeits, and the public is advised to look for the name "DeWitt" on the package, and accept no other. Sold by Green's Pharmacy.

Jonathan Dibbs' Emancipation

By Helen T. Quigg

...Copyright, 1903, by T. C. McClure...

Jerusha Amanda Dibbs was his brother's wife and had asserted and maintained her authority over both his brother and himself ever since she had become a member of the family. All morning he had been wondering uneasily for whom the storm was brewing, and, as her husband had got out of the house unscathed, he feared that he was in for it. He was standing by the window now, looking out aimlessly, wishing that it were over and yet not daring to avoid it, and when she entered the room in which he stood, clearing her throat emphatically, he turned toward her with a shiver of apprehension. He was a stout man, with an air of mild indecision about him; about his soft, sandy hair; about his broad, rounded shoulders; about even his easy, grayish lace sack coat.

"It's pretty capers you have been cutting around that Jennet widow," she said.

Jonathan looked, it must be confessed, not only surprised, but worried. "I hope I have not made any trouble for her," he said doubtfully.

"It's absurd, positively absurd," continued Mrs. Dibbs, flopping into a chair. "The idea of marrying that silly little fool, without a cent to her name, and at your age too."

Her brother-in-law had not really had an intention of any sort in regard to the widow. Indeed, he had never had a decided intention in regard to anything since Mrs. Dibbs had taken possession. Nevertheless he felt mildly indignant enough to make a faint retort. "I am sure, Amanda, you were not much younger when you married Lucien," said he in his quiet way.

The curling pins in which Mrs. Dibbs' front locks were confined bristled with anger.

"I should like to know," she began in a deep, ominous voice, "what business that is of yours. And you know well enough, Jonathan Dibbs, that when I married your brother I was not nearly as old as you are. But anyhow"—her tone had become loud and resonant—"anyhow I never was such a childish simpleton as you are and always will be to the end of your days—to be fooled and taken in by a designing, no account little creature that's been fishing for a husband ever since that poor invalid man of hers died—worried to death by her flightiness, I'll warrant! That's a pretty thing to happen to a man like you, isn't it?" Here Mrs. Dibbs choked, and Jonathan took advantage of the momentary check in her assault to inquire, "Who told you I was going to marry her, Amanda?"

"Who told me?" she burst out. "Who told me? Why, hasn't the little fool herself been telling it all around the town that you wanted to marry her and," in a high, simpering falsetto, "that she didn't know whether she ought to think of it or not, but that Mr. Dibbs was such a nice man and such a friend of her poor, dear Arthur, and she would hate to disappoint him? Oh, the idiot!"

Jonathan Dibbs looked thoughtful. Suddenly the figure of the widow in question appeared before his mind's eye. It was a neat, retiring little figure, with soft brown hair and a small face, slightly sunburned, but sweet and tender, and with an individuality of its own that only a patient, conscientious life could have given it. He compared it with the large, obtrusive face and figure of his sister-in-law, and gradually he began to smile. A sudden sense of relief came to him in the contemplation of the little widow and a strange, unusual sense of pleasure, the joy of the awakening of a desire and a will in him which he had never before suspected.

"I guess the little woman really did think I wanted to marry her," he remarked pleasantly.

"Of course she did," replied Mrs. Dibbs smartly in her loud, scornful voice, not noting the change in her victim's attitude toward her. "Of course she did, the conceited little piece!"

"I wouldn't be absurd if I were you, Amanda," said Jonathan Dibbs. "It doesn't suit your size." He had spoken very slowly and smoothly, but he gasped a little now that he had achieved this crude but radical assertion of his freedom. He had reason to gasp.

"What! You dare! You dare!" She stood before him glaring, and his unaccountable inclination to laugh at her frightened him more than her passion did. "You dare!" she shouted. "You—you brute! I knew that little fool had you in her clutches. I knew it. Did she tell you to say that? I might have known she would bring you to forget all honor and truth and duty. Don't you dare bring her to this house, you brute! Size, indeed! She isn't the size of a fence rail. That's your idea of beauty, I suppose! Just you dare to marry her!"

Jonathan Dibbs, though his heart quaked within him, walked boldly past her to the door. There he turned. "I may send you an invitation to the wedding if she cares to have you come. Anyhow I'll send you an announcement. Say goodby to Lucien for me, will you? Poor Lucien!" He grinned happily into her blazing eyes and, shutting the door with a bang as he went through the house, strode out into the street.

Mrs. Dibbs sank into a chair and after repeating several times the speeches with which she had benefited her brother-in-law indulged in a fit of hysterics, to the vast amusement of the poll parrot and the kitchenmaid.

Jonathan, however, though he was experiencing a faint, rather contemptuous pity for his brother, strode along gayly, as he had never done before. His step was swift and firm, his shoulders were thrown back, his head felt clear as crystal.

"What a fool—what a fool I used to be!" he thought. "What a fool a man is anyhow to let a woman ride over him at her own sweet will! And to think that I stood it for twelve years and never thought of breaking away! It must have been the widow, bless her heart!" Here he smiled to himself sentimentally and wondered how she would take it, the "it" in question being the plan he was going to propose to her.

He flung the gate of the little yard wide open and walked quickly along the path by the side of the house. The widow was on the porch ironing out some lace when he approached, and she looked up with face aglow when she perceived who it was. He lost no time in announcing the object of his visit. He took her hands in his and looked into her wide eyes. "Lilian," he said, "there is a train that leaves here for the city in forty minutes. I want you to get ready and go with me on that train if you can do it in so short a time."

The widow flushed and paled.

"What for?" she asked.

"Why, to get married, of course," he said, surprised that she did not know. There was a silence, and when his arm stole around her, "Hurry up!" in a low voice and a tone whose anxiety did not refer to catching the train.

"I didn't know," she began slowly—"I didn't know we meant to get married. But if you wish it very much—oh, dear!" She hid her face suddenly in his coat.

"Now go," he said after a little, "because we want to catch that train. And wear that blue thing you have with the white spots—you know."

She smiled tremulously. No one had ever noticed her clothes before, and she had always half worshiped him anyhow, and now she was very much confused and very happy.

They managed to catch the train by means of a little running for it, and they rode gayly and breathlessly away from home toward the city. She stole a look at his beaming face and after awhile gathered courage to speak.

"Jonathan," she said softly, "how did I—what did I do to make you think of this? I never hoped"—

He laughed. "Call me Jack," he said, with a blush. They used to call him Jack when he was a big, slow, good natured schoolboy. "And what you did was to make a man of me, that is all," he continued. Then after awhile he laughed again. "We have my sister-in-law to thank for some of this," he remarked slowly, "but," he turned to her and spoke with sudden emphasis—"but you must not let it grieve you if we never have a chance to express our gratitude."

A Common Weakness.

Dr. Joseph Le Conte was an authority, recognized by the world at large, on the science of vision. One day he was showing a class how to detect the blind spot in the human eye. He took two coins and held them, one in each hand, before him on the table.

"Look at both of these steadily," said he, "and gradually move them in opposite directions. Presently they will pass beyond the range of vision. That is due to the blind spot. Continue the movement, and the coins will again emerge to view."

Then the philosopher and naturalist had his little joke. "You can experiment for yourself at home," said he. "But if you are unsuccessful try some other object instead of a coin. Some people have no blind spot for money."

Cold Cream.

No toilet table is complete without a jar of cold cream made of oil of white poppy, four ounces; oil of almonds, two ounces; white wax, one-half ounce; balsam of Peru, two drams. Melt the wax, add the oils and beat together until they form a cream, then add the balsam and lastly a little rosewater. This is an emollient which may be used with good effect once or twice a week, after the bath, to whiten and soften the hands, neck and arms.

MODERATION IN SPORTS.

The American Tendency to Overdo in Everything. The Carelessness of the Athlete.

By Christine Terhune Herrick, Author of "Cradle and Nursery," "First Aid to the Young Housekeepers," "Housekeeping Made Easy," "What to Eat," "In City Tents,

(Copyright, 1904, by Christine Herrick.)

The growing interest in athletics and outdoor sports has brought certain evils in its train. One of the most apparent of these is excess.

No one who has bestowed any study upon physical training and its results has any doubt that it has been of incalculable advantage to most of those who have practiced it. None the less, when we hear of a case of over training which has ended in break down there are never lacking critics to arise and condemn physical culture. The fault lies, however, in the strenuousness of the individual, not in the practice of athletics or in vigorous outdoor exercise.

As a nation we go at things too hard. We lack a sense of proportion. When we stop it all at once. Take, for instance, the case of the average college boy who has made a figure in the athletics of his class and institution. What does he do when he has graduated? How does he set about conserving the strength he has accumulated by his training?

Well, since he leaves college at the beginning of the summer, he may possibly keep up golf and tennis and rowing and swimming during the warm weather. The chances are against his doing anything in the way of systematic training. If he goes into an office it is more than likely that he drops nearly everything in the way of gymnasium practice or vigorous physical exercise. He spends his days at a desk, or it may be behind a counter. All the trained muscles are allowed to grow flabby. The over-stimulated heart shows the result of the lack of exercise. The man begins to break down and the doctors diagnose his case as "athlete's heart."

Everybody knows instances of this kind of thing of children who have been injured by too much exercise, of boys who have hurt themselves by too frequent indulgence in the joys of the swimming pool, of men and women who have overdone in golf or tennis or basket ball or field or track athletics. In nearly every instance the trouble may be traced to the same source—a lack of appreciation of the object of sports of any kind. They are to be viewed as a means,—not an end. Here and there is found some one for whom it is worth while to train or play for a championship. But in the far larger proportion of cases the playing or the riding is to be taken as a means of physical development and improvement of health. And this object is defeated if one yields to the temptation to excess.

This temptation would not have to be reckoned with so much if the counsel of the trainer would be heeded. The physical director in the college or school or the gymnasium knows better than to put pupils to hard work at once. He begins with them gently and makes them exercise in the gymnasium "for form" before he puts them on the track. He discourages over vigorous beginnings, knowing that a rapid beginning means lost time later on. It is the eager amateur who does not understand his own strength and weakness, who makes trouble for himself by going at work or play with an energy that is bound to exhaust his powers at an early stage of the proceedings.

I speak as though it were only the men who did this sort of thing, but we women know better. We recognize the fact that in our enthusiasm lies both our strength and our weakness. Without it we could never accomplish all that falls to the lot of the woman who married and has a home and children to look after. But this very enthusiasm leads us to underestimate our powers and over-work our capabilities. We need to preach moderation to ourselves quite as much as to our children.

For a moment leave the men to themselves and look at the other side of the family. See the girl who is so absorbed in her tennis or golf championship or bicycle record or her canoeing that she is in danger of injuring herself by undue attitude as well. She will grow one sided, and unsymmetrical.

This is the girl who should be introduced to domestic matters. Her mother should do all possible to make her daughter feel that a woman's home training is as important as physical culture. She should strive to interest the girl in all that goes to make house-keeping and home-making important. The girl should have her lessons in the chemistry of food as well as in cookery, should know something of domestic sanitation as well as of washing dishes. Once she is infected with enthusiasm in this direction she will be better able to strike a balance between indoor occupations and out door sports.

While the mother is doing this, she, too, must not overlook the chance she has for her own symmetrical development. If the girl needs to be taught the importance of indoor pursuits, so the mother needs to learn what there is for her in active physical exercise. Probably she, belonging to an earlier generation which did not see the advantages of athletic sports, has been too much given to staying at home or going out only when business called her for a small round of domestic or social duties. Now is her chance to learn something of the joy there is in living when the body is in good trim. If she does not feel up to golf or tennis, she should, if possible, ride a wheel. Or if she does not do that, she should cultivate the habit of taking long walks,—not leisurely strolls, but hard, rapid walks, that send her home, tired, but in a glow.

The same rule of faith and practice should be followed by the man of the house with his boys. When his son leaves college or school and drops the active physical sports, the father should see to it that the lad does not immerse himself in business to the injury of his health. The parents will be weaned from excessive devotion to business if he has to aid his boy in learning moderation. If the latter cannot afford to keep up the gymnasium practice which has brought him into good condition, he must find a substitute for it. He must join the local golf or tennis club and take his part in the amateur matches. Or he must ride a wheel and his father must go with him, not only to make his society a means of preventing the boy from riding too far and too long, but because he himself sees the necessity of getting out of business into the fresh air and of keeping his muscles as well as his brain in good working condition.

Quay's Memory for faces was Wonderful.

Quay had a remarkable memory for names and faces. Occasionally he could not fit a name to a face, but ordinarily his memory was very accurate. He seldom forgot a person he had met once. Robert P. Rhodes, assistant cashier of the Allegheny National bank, who was a warm admirer of the senator's, tells a story of how the senator had remembered him. He said:

"I had often seen Senator Quay in the bank, and knew him so well, that when ever he would come in I would say, 'Step right on back, senator,' and he would go on. One day I bumped into him in the Duquesne hotel, and after I spoke to him I said, 'I don't think you remember me, senator.' 'I would remember you well enough if I wanted to get a note renewed,' laughed Senator Quay."

One man whom the senator had forgotten was Charles F. McKenna, of Pittsburg. After the tangle arose over the appointment of Mr. McKenna to the United States judgeship in Porto Rico, several people tried to recall Mr. McKenna to the senator. Senator Quay was told that he and McKenna served in the civil war in the same regiment, and in fact that Mr. McKenna acted as his orderly for some time. William Montgomery was one of the men who spoke to Senator Quay about Mr. McKenna having been his orderly.

"I remember Barney McKenna all right," said the senator, "but I can't place this fellow. What does he look like?"

Mr. Montgomery gave a very accurate description of Mr. McKenna, one which any Pittsburger would recognize, but it did not tell the senator anything. Finally he said:

"If this is the orderly who stole a horse for me just before South Mountain, tell him I am for him for United States judge—in Porto Rico.

The Ruling Passion Strong.

"Old Adam Forepaugh," said a friend of the veteran showman, "once had a big white parrot that had learned to say: 'One at a time, gentlemen—one at a time—don't crush.'"

"The bird had, of course, acquired this sentence from the ticket-taker of the show. Well, one day the parrot got lost in the country, and Mr. Forepaugh leaped into his buggy and started out post-haste to hunt for it.

"People here and there who had seen the parrot directed him in his quest, and finally, as he was driving by a cornfield he was overjoyed to hear a familiar voice.

"He got out and entered the field and found the parrot in the middle of a flock of crows that had pecked him till he was almost featherless. As the crows bit and nipped away, the parrot, lying on his side, repeated over and over: 'One at a time, gentlemen—one at a time—don't crush.'"

The growing interest in athletics and outdoor sports has brought certain evils in its train. One of the most apparent of these is excess.

No one who has bestowed any study upon physical training and its results has any doubt that it has been of incalculable advantage to most of those who have practiced it. None the less, when we hear of a case of over training which has ended in break down there are never lacking critics to arise and condemn physical culture. The fault lies, however, in the strenuousness of the individual, not in the practice of athletics or in vigorous outdoor exercise.

As a nation we go at things too hard. We lack a sense of proportion. When we stop it all at once. Take, for instance, the case of the average college boy who has made a figure in the athletics of his class and institution. What does he do when he has graduated? How does he set about conserving the strength he has accumulated by his training?

Well, since he leaves college at the beginning of the Summer, he may possibly keep up golf and tennis and rowing and swimming during the warm weather. The chances are against his doing anything in the way of systematic training. If he goes into an office it is more than likely that he drops nearly everything in the way of gymnasium practice or vigorous physical exercise. He spends his days at a desk, or it may be behind a counter. All the trained muscles are allowed to grow flabby. The over-stimulated heart shows the result of the lack of exercise. The man begins to break down and the doctors diagnose his case as "athlete's heart."

Everybody knows instances of this kind of thing of children who have been injured by too much exercise, of boys who have hurt themselves by too frequent indulgence in the joys of the swimming pool, of men and women who have overdone in golf or tennis or basket ball or field or track athletics. In nearly every instance the trouble may be traced to the same source—a lack of appreciation of the object of sports of any kind. They are to be viewed as a means,—not an end. Here and there is found some one for whom it is worth while to train or play for a championship. But in the far larger proportion of cases the playing or the riding is to be taken as a means of physical development and improvement of health. And this object is defeated if one yields to the temptation to excess.

This temptation would not have to be reckoned with so much if the counsel of the trainer would be heeded. The physical director in the college or school or the gymnasium knows better than to put pupils to hard work at once. He begins with them gently and makes them exercise in the gymnasium "for form" before he puts them on the track. He discourages over vigorous beginnings, knowing that a rapid beginning means lost time later on. It is the eager amateur who does not understand his own strength and weakness, who makes trouble for himself by going at work or play with an energy that is bound to exhaust his powers at an early stage of the proceedings.

I speak as though it were only the men who did this sort of thing, but we women know better. We recognize the fact that in our enthusiasm lies both our strength and our weakness. Without it we could never accomplish all that falls to the lot of the woman who married and has a home and children to look after. But this very enthusiasm leads us to underestimate our powers and over-work our capabilities. We need to preach moderation to ourselves quite as much as to our children.

For a moment leave the men to themselves and look at the other side of the family. See the girl who is so absorbed in her tennis or golf championship or her bicycle record or her canoeing that she is in danger of injuring herself by undue attitude as well. She will grow one sided, and unsymmetrical.

This is the girl who should be introduced to domestic matters. Her mother should do all possible to make her daughter feel that a woman's home training is as important as physical culture. She should strive to interest the girl in all that goes to make house-keeping and home-making important. The girl should have her lessons in the chemistry of food as well as in cookery, should know something of domestic sanitation as well as of washing dishes. Once she is infected with enthusiasm in this direction she will be better able to strike a balance between indoor occupations and out door sports.

While the mother is doing this, she, too, must not overlook the chance she has for her own symmetrical development. If the girl needs to be taught the importance of indoor pursuits, so the mother needs to learn what there is for her in active physical exercise. Probably she, belonging to an earlier generation which did not see the advantages of athletic sports, has been too much given to staying at home or going out only when business called her for a small round of domestic or social duties. Now is her chance to learn something of the joy there is in living when the body is in good trim. If she does not feel up to golf or tennis, she should, if possible, ride a wheel. Or if she does not do that, she should cultivate the habit of taking long walks,—not leisurely strolls, but hard, rapid walks, that send her home, tired, but in a glow.

The same rule of faith and practice should be followed by the man of the house with his boys. When his son leaves college or school and drops the active, physical sports, the father should see to it that the lad does not immerse himself in business to the injury of his health. The parents will be weaned from excessive devotion to business if he has to aid his boy in learning moderation. If the latter cannot afford to keep up the gymnasium practice which has brought him into good condition, he must find a substitute for it. He must join the local golf or tennis club and take his part in the amateur matches. Or he must ride a wheel and his father must go with him, not only to make his society a means of preventing the boy from riding too far and too long, but because he himself sees the necessity of getting out of business into the fresh air and of keeping his muscles as well as his brain in good working condition.

Quay's Memory for faces was Wonderful.

Quay had a remarkable memory for names and faces. Occasionally he could not fit a name to a face, but ordinarily his memory was very accurate. He seldom forgot a person he had met once. Robert P. Rhodes, assistant cashier of the Allegheny National bank, who was a warm admirer of the senator's, tells a story of how the senator had remembered him. He said:

"I had often seen Senator Quay in the bank, and knew him so well, that when ever he would come in I would say, 'Step right on back, senator,' and he would go on. One day I bumped into him in the Duquesne hotel, and after I spoke to him I said, 'I don't think you remember me, senator.' 'I would remember you well enough if I wanted to get a note renewed,' laughed Senator Quay."

One man whom the senator had forgotten was Charles F. McKenna, of Pittsburg. After the tangle arose over the appointment of Mr. McKenna to the United States judgeship in Porto Rico, several people tried to recall Mr. McKenna to the senator. Senator Quay was told that he and McKenna served in the civil war in the same regiment, and in fact that Mr. McKenna acted as his orderly for some time, William Montgomery was one of the men who spoke to Senator Quay about Mr. McKenna having been his orderly.

"I remember Barney McKenna all right," said the senator, "but I can't place this fellow. What does he look liks?"

Mr. Montgomery gave a very accurate description of Mr. McKenna, one which any Pittsburger would recognize, but it did not tell the senator anything. Finally he said:

"If this is the orderly who stole a horse for me just before South Mountain, tell him I am for him for United States judge—in Porto Rico.

The Ruling Passion Strong.

"Old Adam Forepaugh," said a friend of the veteran showman, "once had a big white parrot that had learned to say: 'One at a time, gentlemen—one at a time—don't crush.'"

"The bird had, of course, acquired this sentence from the ticket-taker of the show. Well, one day the parrot got lost in the country, and Mr. Forepaugh leaped into his buggy and started out post-haste to hunt for it.

"People here and there who had seen the parrot directed him in his quest, and finally, as he was driving by a cornfield he was overjoyed to hear a familiar voice.

"He got out and entered the field and found the parrot in the middle of a flock of crows that had pecked him till he was almost featherless. As the crows bit and nipped away, the parrot, lying on his side, repeated over and over: 'One at a time, gentlemen—one at a time—don't crush.'"

—Col. William Dorris, of Huntingdon, enjoys the rare distinction of traveling on a Pennsylvania railroad pass issued in 1850, which is without limit. This pass is a curiosity, having on it, in addition to the necessary wording the picture of an engine and two cars, which are unique as might be imagined. The engine is anything but modern, and the coaches have the old "possom belly" in which gaggage was carried. The colonel retains this pass because of the fact that he was one of the original stockholders of the company, in which he is still largely interested, and has been one of the company's attorneys since 1850.

—The Pennsylvania railroad company will pay out to the Altoona shopmen this month the sum of $502,700 which is about $100,000 less than was paid out the last pay day. The decrease is the result of the suspension to two thousand men from the shops during the past month. The effects of the reduction were not felt so much in Altoona during the past few weeks, but now that the company is paying off the men the decrease in the amount of money paid out will be felt by everybody. The amount will likely be swelled some next month, as it is apparent that work is picking up to some extent in a number of the departments, especially at the car shops.

Independent Operators Organizing.

The Philipsburg Journal says: A movement is now on foot to effect a permanent protective organization of independent bituminous coal operators. The purpose is to take legal action to obtain redress for alleged wrongs and losses caused by railroad discrimination in various forms which, it is held, works to the serious disadvantage and injury of the small operator who is striving to compete with the big companies.

STEAMER WRECKED.

Five Lives Lost In Collision With Freight Steamer.

MONTREAL, June 13.—The Richelieu and Ontario Navigation company's steamer Canada, bound from Quebec for Montreal, came into collision with the Dominion Coal company's collier Cape Breton, six miles below Sorel, early Sunday. Twenty minutes later the Canada went to the bottom. At the time of the collision there were 110 people on board the Canada. Five were lost, the others were rescued. Those who perished were Alfred Thibeault, ticket agent of the company at Quebec, and his sons, aged 12 and 15; Purser Bonneterre, of the Canada; a man named Brunet, of Sorel. He is missing and it is supposed that he perished.

The collision occurred just as dawn was breaking. The Cape Breton lay at the entrance of the Lake St. Peter channel, waiting for daylight so as to find her way through. She was getting under way when the Canada, making for Sorel at full speed, came into view.

Just what the collision was due to and who is responsible for it has not yet been determined, for the officers of the Canada declined to talk, but from the statements given out it would appear that the Cape Breton had not headway on enough to answer her rudder and that she swerved across the path of the passenger boat, her bow striking the Canada just forward of the paddle box on the starboard side and tearing its way half through.

Then the Cape Brenton swung clear and the two steamers came alongside one another.

The shock of the collision aroused the sleeping passengers. The Canada at once began to settle and as the Cape Breton did not appear to be seriously damaged the passengers were hurriedly transferred to this steamer. In the excitement some of the passengers jumped overboard and were picked up by boats from the Canada and the Cape Breton, but a great majority of those on board did not become excited, while the discipline showed by the crew of the Canada was excellent.

Twenty minutes later, when the Canada went down alongside the Cape Breton resting on her side in the mud, al the passengers who could be found had been transferred. Thibeault and his two sons occupied a state room near where the Cape Breton's bow entered the Canada, and it is supposed that they were killed in their berths. The body of the father was recovered later in the day, but the remains of the two sons have not been found.

Bonneterre, the purser, was seen after the collision, making his way to his quarters on the lower deck, with the intention of saving his cash and his records, and it is supposed that he perished in the attempt. Brunot was a second class passenger and no one saw him after the collision, though it is just possible that he went ashore with the crew of one of the boats which was sent to secure help from Sorel.

Assistance arrived about 4 o'clock Sunday afternoon, the steam barge Prefontaine having been found in the harbor with stem up. Prefontaine took the passengers and crew to Sorel and they were brought up to this city this afternoon on board the company's steam Colubian. Many of the passengers who occupied state rooms on the upper deck were fortunate enough to save their baggage, but those on the main deck lost their belongings. Some of the rescued persons had but little clothing on when they were taken on board the Cape Breton, but they were supplied with the necessary garmentt when they arrived at Sorel.

All the passengers speak highly of the efforts made by the captain and the crew of the Canada to save the lives of those aboard and to their exertions is ascribed the small loss of life.

There was much excitement here when the news of the sinking of the steamer was received, first reports placing the loss of life at one hundred.
